

LITTLE BENNY'S NOTE BOOK
By Lee Page

Loretta Miner had a party last night and me and Puds Simkins went invited on account of her being mad at us, and we were setting on Puds' front steps talking about how much we didn't give a darn how many parties she had and whether we was invited or not, me saying, "Wat do I care, I'd rather be setting out here getting the fresh air than setting in her old parlor, pretending to be enjoying myself just to be polite."

So would I, sed Puds, Im glad she didnt invite me, because if she had of I mite of went jest out of politeness and had a heck of a bum time.

Sure, me too, lets wawk past her house and laff rite out loud to show we consider its more of a joke than a party, I sed.

Wich we did, laffing like anything jest wen we got outside Loretta Miners parlor, and all the fellows and girls ran to the windows to see who was doing all the laffing and I me and Puds laffed even louder and kopy on wawking past as if we was so glad we wasent at the party that we couldnt help laffing, and wen we got down to the corner Puds sed, Lets wawk back and do it agen.

Sure, all rite, we'll show them wat we think of their old party, I sed.

And we wawked past agen and started to laff loud as anything, going, How haw haw haw haw haw and bending almost in half as if we had to on account of laffing so hard, and jest then wat came down on us but a lot of hot water from the 2nd story window, and me and Puds quick stopped laffing and ran, and wen we got a little ways away lets wait, lets wawk past on the other side of the street and do it agen jest to prove we aint discouraged.

Wich we did, going over to the other side of the street and laffing all our mite for about 2 minnits and then going back and setting on Puds' steps agen feeling a little wetter but otherwise jest the same.
