

EVIDENCE VEILED IN KENNEDY CASE

Not All of Clues to Be Presented as Grand Jury Begins Investigation

HARDWARE CLERK QUIZZED

By the Associated Press
Los Angeles, Calif., Aug. 11.—Formal investigation of the mysterious slaying last Friday night of J. Helton Kennedy, broker, at his summer cottage in Beverly Glen, near here, is scheduled to begin this afternoon. Grand Jury here this afternoon.

The evidence in the case, involving Madeline O'Brien, Kennedy's companion the night of the slaying, and Arthur C. Burch, her former college mate and acquaintance of Kennedy, both held in jail, the latter under suspicion of murder, was not all presented today, as was indicated by officials.

Thomas Lee Woolwine, District Attorney, indicated that among the witnesses to be called will be Dick Parsons, garage man, who identified Burch as having rented an automobile from him the night of the killing. The three of the car corresponded, officials said, to the tracks made by a machine parked on that night near the scene of the shooting.

Shotgun Not Found
Search for the shotgun used in the slaying of Kennedy for several days had, up to this morning, been unavailing, although the search covered territory from the mountain gird to the ocean and a considerable distance down the water near the mouth of Santa Monica Canyon.

A feature of late yesterday's developments was the promised visit to the District Attorney's office of a young hardware clerk of this city, who was understood to have sold shotgun shells to a stranger in his store about ten days ago. It was understood as a tempt was made to identify Burch as the man to whom the clerk sold shells corresponding to the two discharged ones found in the bushes near the scene of the killing.

Assistant District Attorney Koves declined to say what information he had contributed to the investigation.

Nothing in Black Bag
The large black leather bag sent from San Francisco to Helton Kennedy, chain, in care of a man at which she was staying before her detention by the authorities, yielded nothing of value to the investigation, it was said.

A strict censorship of information coming from the District Attorney's office was declared by Mr. Woolwine today.

"We have some good leads," he said, "but they cannot be discussed now." He promised some action within twenty-four hours.

After a four-hour getting yesterday Mrs. Madeline O'Brien declared that she was absolutely indifferent to her fate.

"I don't mean to be morbid," she told reporters, "when I say I don't care what happens. If you could only know how I feel after having lost what to me meant more than life itself—Helton, the man I loved as I loved nothing else."

"I shall make no defense," she said, "if they indict me. I don't care if they convict me; I don't care if they hang me. Life to me after this unhappiness, and I have known unhappiness often, is but a mere school for a life to come, a mere waiting room with natural laws and unchangeable customs that lean only help in a small way to prepare us for something bigger somewhere else. I had my life and my liberty a year ago when I was still, as I thought, a girl. It seems I have need lately."

It is said Mrs. O'Brien admitted during her examination that she had invited Burch, who is held as a suspect, to come to Los Angeles. She explained, however, that she did this because she thought the climate would be good for his health.

A letter to Kennedy from Mrs. O'Brien, written December 27, 1918, and found among the slain man's effects, was made public yesterday. It said:

"It has not been easy ever to keep my faith in you, Helton. You have perhaps made it harder than you realize. Perhaps I have not always made things easy for you, but I do know I have done the best I could under the circumstances."

"We both should have been honorable enough to have played square after I was married. Mr. C. has done more for me than any one else ever would. I am not worthy of him, but the least I could have done was to have paid no bargain, but I listened to you. I believed you loved me; you know I love you."

"The last year has been hell for both of us. Have you ever really tried to be square with me? If you didn't intend to be square why didn't you leave. I am not trying to shirk any responsibility, but, my Helton, you know I was willing to pay the price and return to Chicago this summer. Your love words held me."

Arthur C. Burch is wearing over the circumstantial evidence against him. He has not seen Mrs. O'Brien and knows nothing of what she has said about him. He said he was in Los Angeles. The mess is all as much a puzzle to me as to you. I have known Madeline for six years, since she entered Northwestern University, but I can't say why she is held for this crime. But I have no misgivings; truth will out in the end. What I'm most interested in is what my dear mother and my old school friends in Chicago are hearing about me. Please tell them not to worry."

"Why did you come to Los Angeles?" he was asked.

"Well, you know all about that now. The murder of Kennedy is a mystery to me, the most horrible thing I have ever known. The last forty-eight hours have been a bad dream and I am sure I will sooner or later awaken."

"I happened to take that room in the hotel in an effort to economize. You have gone to the Alexandria, where Madeline lived, but I felt I must cut down expenses as much as possible."

MOTHER ADMITS DECEIT

Monticello, N. Y., Aug. 11.—"Jack Brown," the girl in man's clothing, stood off the queries and jests of more than 200 guests at the Kitcher Brothers' big "arm boarding house" here last yesterday. In the late afternoon Mary Hodowanetz, his "fiancee" appeared, accompanied by a constable.

Mrs. Hodowanetz said she had disappeared from a window and disappeared. Mary searched the place high and low, but could not find "Jack."

She retired with the constable to a neighbor's and sent a decoy message which failed of its object. She returned to the Kitcher place, where half of the guests were acting as pickets for "Jack," who ran off.

Max Kitcher, one of the proprietors, was bursting with wrath and said his place was disorganized. When informed that "Jack's" mother admitted that "Jack" was a girl Kitcher said he would co-operate with Mary and the constable and set up "Jack" as soon as "he" reappeared.

OCULT SCIENCE CAUSE OF SUIT FOR SEPARATION

Husband's Refusal to Extend Conscience Leads to Marital Rift
New York, Aug. 11.—Mrs. Laurel E. Small, occult scientist and erstwhile editor of "The World's Journal of Philosophy," which recently went out of circulation, filed suit for separation from her husband, who books variety acts, for the one, two, three, four or more a date. At her home in the Lorraine Hotel she was willing if not eager to discuss the situation.

A difference of metaphysical philosophies was the underlying cause of the rift in the life, Mrs. Small explained.

"My husband looks upon woman merely as a sex, a body of flesh," she said. "As for me, I am a firm believer in the extension of consciousness."

Everybody can extend their consciousness, said Mrs. Small, but her husband, she charges, refused to extend his. She confessed that she was able to extend her consciousness as far as Venus.

She is in constant communication with Venus. The women of that planet wear knickerbockers. That is only one of the things Mrs. Small has found out through her extended consciousness.

"I discovered the key to the riddle of the Sphinx and unveiled Isis," she said.

"All bodies, whether animal, vegetable or mineral, live in and are supported by a universal ether. Built of double potency which resonates and is the parent of electricity. It is the Light of Being. In the animal part of man it is magnetism. In the spiritual world it is soul energy, the secret force of which the sages wrote and by which the magus performs seemingly impossible miracles."

Of this vital fluid (she said) Mrs. Small said her husband is not possessed of one-millionth part of a gram. She added:

"I cannot tell all that I know about Edward's life. He condenses everything that is beyond his comprehension. When we lived together, he would on sight of one of my cherished volumes on occult science, be into the most uncontrollable rage and would hurl the book across the room. He did this on several occasions. Edward Small is a product of the age of utility; unable to grasp anything out of life but money."

As to that Mrs. Small said her husband receives about $12,000 a week out of his theatrical book business.

ROYAL DEFICIT GROWING

By the Associated Press
London, Aug. 11.—King George has been hard hit by the increased cost of living during and since the war. This statement was made in the House of Commons last night by Austin Chamberlain, Lord Privy Seal, who said that the King's civil list (the sum provided from public funds for the expenses of the royal household) had shown a progressive deficit for several years.

The deficit in 1919 was 24,000 pounds, and in 1920 45,000 pounds, and it probably would be greater in 1921, despite a reduction in the State functions and the strictest economies which the King had initiated.

King George, Mr. Chamberlain said, had been meeting the shortage from a fund he had accumulated for such an emergency and had refused to give his assent to a suggestion that the Govern-

WORK SOON ON OLD CITY HALL

The physical work of restoring the old City Hall, northwest corner of Fifth and Chestnut streets, to its original condition, will be started in a few days. She operation has been left home because of disagreements with her parents over her insistence on wearing male attire, which she had put on whenever possible, since early childhood.

She is tall and slender, but possesses great strength. Hard manual labor has made her hands rough, "not soft like a lady's," as one of her little sisters explained today, while the mother told the story of her daughter.

Mrs. Schimeck said that Caroline and Mary Hodowanetz both were "crazy over each other," but Mary could not understand why they should not marry.

Seven brothers and sisters, the oldest sixteen and the youngest two years, are living with their mother.
