Firemen's Band Saves Day at Shibe Park and Proves Its Class as Big-League Organization

Band Performs Better Than the Athletics and Makes Hit in Opening Game of Series With Yankees - Mackmen Have Stage Fright and Hand Game to Visitors

By ROBERT W. MAXWELL

Sports Editor Evening Public Ledser THE Firemen's Band played at Shibe Park yesterday. This is a wonderful musical organization and very much big league. The New York Yankees also played at Shibe Park on the same afternoon. organization and proves it whenever necessary. The Athletics didn't play nor did they show anything that even resembled big league caliber. Therefore, the Firemen's Band upheld the prestige of Philadelphia by demonstrat-ing to 10,000 cash customers and 2000 kids that it could play something. The Yankees made the populace of New York happy by doing the same thing and increasing their lead in the pennant race. The Athletics were thrown

All of which is a brief prologue to the sad affair staged on the home lot before a big gang of loyal sufferers. The Yankees walloped the A's by the score of 7 to 3 and were far more superior than the score indicated. The league leaders socked the ball all over the place, ran bases in a wild and woozy manner, swept the men of Mack off their feet and walked home under wraps. Outside of that it was a swell ball game.

Some terrible baseball was perpetrated in the early innings. The A's played a faltering game, and acted like a gang of raw, green sand-lotters playing before a crowd for the first time. There was steerage class written all over the work of the home-town boys and nothing could be worse than that. It seemed as if the A's could not forget they were playing the Yankees and also couldn't forget they were the A's. They stepped out on the field licked to a frazzle and the game had nine innings to go. They were there to take a beating and took it. Connie Mack must have suffered untold tortures on

The Yankees pulled stuff they couldn't get away with in a game with Nativity. Bridesburg. Shanahan, Fleisher or any of the other scrappy twilight clubs. For example, take the second inning. Schang was on third and Miller on first. Miller started to steal and the ball was thrown to second. Miller was a few feet from the bag and started to run back to first. He arrived there safely because the infielders were looking at Schang, who did not leave the bag. Then, when the double steal failed to work, Miller calmly stole second without opposition. The A's seemed to be up the air and frightened to death. No wonder they lost the game in the early innings. They could have lost a dozen games.

IT IS a mystery how a big league ball club can show such a reversal in form. Against Cleveland the A's played real baseball and fought hard in every game. Against the Yanks they were like a bantam trying to cop the title from Jack Dempsey. Perhaps it was stage fright and perhaps the boys figured they had won enough games this seeek. But schatever it was, it was terrible.

Have a Look at the Horrible Details

THE game was not very old when the balloon ascension was staged. Miller was an easy out and Peck doubled. This was made possible when Hasty served a slow ball, which staggered up to the plate like a disabled freight train. Roger knew it was coming and couldn't help socking it.

And then came Ruth. Bambino got hold of one and sent it on a line to right field. Whitey Witt, knowing that Ruth was at bat-they couldn't fool him-decided that it was a home run and instead of running back to the fence, ran forward. At that, he almost was hit, for the ball struck the fence about two feet from the ground and bounced back for a double. This should have been an easy out, but Witt thought otherwise. A real outfielder cov'd have stuck the ball in his hip pocket.

That was the start and more was to follow. In the second, with Pipt on second. Schang walloped a grounder between third and short. The ball rolled into left field and Tilly Walker, after making a marvelous stop with his bare hand, hurled the ball to the plate. It was a great throw and had it reached Perkins the decision on Pipp might have been close. However, Hasty, who wouldn't have been near the ball had it been necessary, shuffled over, intercepted the throw for some reason and all hands were safe. Three runs came homeward in the first two innings and there was a chance to stop all

Connie Mack has worked hard with his ball club, has taught them how to play the game, has drilled and drilled the players, but he cannot go out there and play the game for them. After yesterday's exhibition he should buy the boys building blocks.

Babe Ruth was the big hero of the afternoon with his home run sock into the left-field bleachers in the fourth. It was his forty-third of the season and came when two of his pals were on the sacks. Hasty was removed before Bambino stepped up and Keefe was on the mound. He pitched two balls and the next was a foul strike. Then, with the count of two and one, two out and two on base, Keefe laid one in there and it sailed far FAR away. The Babe has a new stunt this trip. He is using his bean and trying to cross the opposition. The infield plays back for him and on two occasions yesterday he tried to bunt. He would have beaten the throw each time had he laid the ball in fair territory.

The A's counted three times. Tilly Walker, who, by the way, is one of the few real ball players on the team, hit his seventeenth homer in the stands in the sixth. In the seventh Welsh hit a long drive over Miller's head, which squirted out of the Yank's outfielder's hands after a hard try. In the eighth doubles by Witt and Tilly Walker sent in the final tally. Perkins and Tilly Walker looked like regular ball players yesterday. That's all there is, there

AS WAS said before, it's a good thing the Firemen's Band was at Shibe Park yesterday afternoon. Those guys can PLAY.

Old-Timer Admits Ruth Is Marvel

MUCH has been written in sport columns comparing the old-time ball player with the modern high-priced athlete. The ball player of other years usually will talk at length on the ability of the men of his day and before the conversation is over his listener is convinced that Davy Bancroft is a slouch and Hughey Jennings the greatest shortstop that ever shortstopped. The veteran will admit that Alexander is a good pitcher, but would made to look like a piker against Cy Young, if such a battle were possible and he will tell you that Babe Ruth never would have been heard of if he'd been playing back in the early eighties. All of which may be true. It is not our idea to start an argument about something that happened during the Centennial year, for at that time we hadn't even started to break milk bottles.

However, the point we want to bring out now is that occasionally we run across an old-timer who will admit that baseball is just as good and perhaps a little bit better now than it was twenty-five years ago. But one dashes into a veteran of this type about as often as Washington crosses the Delaware.

Such an old-timer is Amos Rusie, one of the greatest pitchers in the history of baseball. Amos, as you know, now is official groundkeeper or something like that at the Polo grounds, where he has plenty of chances to look over the new talent the major leagues have produced. Rusie was asked recently what part of the modern game impressed him most. He didn't stop to think it over before he gave his answer. The reply came immediately.

WE HAD great hitters in my time," he continued, "but none could hit as hard as Ruth."

Modern Pitchers Handicapped

RUSIE is a quiet, retiring, unassuming man on the other side of fifty years. He never talks much unless spoken to and then only to answer questions. He was asked what he thought of the present-day pitchers, but he said he would rather not commit himself on that point until he has seen more games. You see, it's been almost twenty years since he has seen a major league game.

"The pitcher of today is handicapped." he said. "The ball is livelier and the batamen are helped by the rules imposed on the hurlers. This can be carried too far. Give the pitchers a chance. But the fans want hitsuppose, and they're getting it.

Baseball has grown into a great national institution. The crowds that attend the games are greater than ever. The White Sox scandal has not hurt the game much. The fact that Judge Landis is Commissioner means baseball will grow infinitely more powerful.

Rusie was in his prime more than a score of years ago. He was the best right-hand pitcher of his day and is rated with Walter Johnson as having possessed the speediest fast ball of all pitchers. He was the hero of the Polo grounds back in 1900, but now the great throng of fans pass him without recognizing him.

Back around 1900 Rusie meant more to baseball than did John McGraw, Hughey Jennings or Kid Gleason, but fate has not been as kind to him as it has been to his contemporaries. In 1900 Rusie hurt his right arm throwing to first base and, although he remained in the big leagues for two more seasons, he eventually was forced out. He returned to his home in Muncie, and, where he worked as a laborer for a number of years. Later he went Seattle to work in a lumber yard.

McGRAW has not forgotten his former rival. He respects him as a great pitcher and made the position of assistant superintendent of the Polo Grounds for his one time opponent, Copyright, 1921, by Public Ledger Company
