Mr. de Valera proposed Arthur Grif-fith, founder of the Sinn Fein, and Premier and Minister of Foreign Af-airs, and re-election of the other Ministers, and the Dail so voted.

When Speaker MacNeill took the chair on the opening of the session, De Valera tendered the resignations of himself and the Cabinet.

Then John J. McKeown, who recently was released from prison after having been sentenced to death, proposed De Valera as "president of the Irish Republic," first in Gaelle and then in English. None, he said, had shown such ability to "beat out ancient

"I distrust the whole undertaking the R-38 (the old name of the dirigible) crossing the Atlantic, especially at this time, although I am not criticizing the Navy Department for buying the ship Although my premonition is not founded on a scientific basis. I think the enterprise is bazardons and useless and that it will not be of much gain. Mr. Harvey added, according to the Daily Mail, that when he saw the ship he acquired an involuntary distrust of "the whole business" and had worried about it since. Later on Wednesday, the newspaper asserts, Mr. Harvey said, "I cannot rid myself of the fear that something has happened to the airship," and that soon after this he received a telephone message informing

ORDERED TO W. VA. ENGINEER POINTS OUT WEAKNESS OF ZR-2

New York, Aug. 26.-Vital structural defects in design and construction caused the collapse of the ZR-2, in the engineers of this city. Mr. MacMechen has been a close passed three years in Germany study ing Zeppelin construction, and in 1914 lesigned and built in England a 250foot rigid dirigible, which was financed by the late E. Marshall Fox for presby the late E. Marshan entation to the British Admiralty.

"In my opinion," said Mr. MacMechen yesterday, "the horrible catastrophe was due to the fact that the ailders of the craft failed to compre ping of the gas compartments and the parting of many pipes and connections. "There are two forces to be met by the designers, one, the internal pressure of the volume of gas, and the other the external pressure of the air on the craft, set up by its motion. "The earliest Zeppelins were constructed with the same diameter throughout their entire length, giving a uniform size of cylinder throughout.

After the war broke out it was found necessary to increase the diameter of the Zeppelin amidships in order to carry greater loads to greater heights, and thus both to escape gunfire and to carry aloft effective high exploaires. It is evident that when the girth of the air-ship is increased amidships there is a greater volume of gas at that point which places tremendous, uneven gas pressure on this section of the frame. This would give a tendency to hump in the center if there were any structural weakness at that point, and any subse quent re-enforcement at this point would only tend to throw excess stress on that part of the ship, which would destroy the uniformity of stress fore and aft. This defect would immediately become apparent whenever the ship was driven forward at top speed, or was turned too sharply on its end."
