15,000 MARCHERS IN LABOR PAGEANT; WOMEN LEAD LINE

Pauline Newman, With Trades Union League, Leads Column in Broad Street

FLOATS AMONG FEATURES; CRAMP STRIKERS IN RANKS

Labor's legion, 15,000 strong, on this Labor Day, swept down Broad street this morning in one of the brightest demonstrations of its kind ever seen in Philadelphia.

The parade was noteworthy in two respects—in the absence of banners and in the strong note of Americanism that was struck throughout.

"These colors were seen in a Liberty Loan drive. We are 100 per cent American."

That placard was carried behind the national colors and the Union Jack borne at the head of the Navy Yard floaters by an escort of armed soldiers. In a sense it represented the whole spirit of the procession.

Every marcher carried a small American flag and a happy smile and wore an unusually good suit of clothes. There was an air of orderliness, precision, efficiency and pride in strong contrast to similar parades—say five years ago.

Led by an escort of police the parade left Broad street and Fairmount avenue at 10:45 o'clock, with Benjamin J. Harrison, president of the Central Labor Union, as chief marshal, heading the 120 trade unions represented in the line.

Big Officials March. Harrison was followed by a staff made up of the Special Committee of Twenty-five and delegates from all central bodies. These men, with the international representatives present, dropped out of line at Broad street and Moyamensing avenue and reviewed the parade.

The international representatives were Joseph Ritchie, representing Samuel Gompers and the American Federation of Labor; Ernest Siefker, international representative of the Machinists; James Cavan, international representative of the Boilermakers' Union; John Tobin, international vice president of the Blacksmiths' Union; J. W. O'Donnell, international representative of the Electrical Workers' Union, and John Voll, international president of the Glassworkers' Union.

Following the union dignitaries came first the women's division, led by Miss Pauline Newman, of the Women's Trade Union League. This division was made up of the several trades employing women chiefly, and the first in line were the Women's Auxiliary of the Cramps' Strikers (as their banner had it), about 250 young women all dressed in white.

Following the women's division came the metal trades, led by Charles A. Scott, of the Boilermakers' Union; the printing trades, led by William Young, of the Typographical Union; the textile trades, led by Michael McHugh, of the Upholstery Weavers' Union; the miscellaneous division, led by Horace Wilkinson, of the Hosiery Makers' Union; and the building trades, led by Joseph Allison, of the Plumbers' Union.

Looked Prosperous. Only about 15 per cent of the marchers were men at present on strike and the general appearance of the parade was prosperous. They were full of enthusiasm as were the thousands of onlookers lining the sidewalks who lined Broad street from the starting place to the reviewing stand.

Crowds rolled back and forth as the various groups of rosters scattered along the curbs with hurrahs as enthusiastic as their own.

Every one seemed proud and happy from Marshall Harrison down to the curb in front of the Central High School at Broad and Green streets. The marchers, however, were not so happy as they looked. The youngsters attracted the attention of every union group and had their cheers returned in kind.

Something of the Americanism dominant in the hearts of the marchers came out in an incident just before the start.

LABOR HAS ITS ANNUAL PARADE

The Women's Trade Union League is shown ready to march in the annual Labor Day parade, headed by Miss Pauline Newman (wearing shoulder sash). Among the floats was that of the Upholsterers' Union, representing "Betsy Ross and the first flag." In the center of the group John A. Lodge, representing George Washington, is taking the flag from Betsy Ross (Ethel Caldwell), while Robert Morris (C. A. Seitz) looks on from the left. Leon Patrucci is in the rear of the group. The other photograph is that of Benjamin Harrison, the grand marshal of the parade.

100 SHOTS FIRED IN BANDIT CHASE

Occupants of Touring Car and Truck Escape After Mad Dash Along Haverford Avenue

TRAIL LOST IN LLANERCH

A wild two-mile chase after motor bandits, in which more than a hundred shots were fired, roused West Philadelphia shortly after 4 o'clock this morning. The chase extended from Haverford avenue and Parrish street to Llanerch, where the outlaws got away.

Motorcycle policemen Ellrich and Mason were standing with their machine at the corner of Haverford avenue and Parrish street when their attention was attracted to two cars proceeding at break-neck speed west on Parrish street. One was a truck carrying six men and the other a big touring car with four men. Neither had license tags.

Careening past the astonished patrolmen both cars whirled into Haverford avenue and, putting on still more speed at the sight of the uniforms, sped out of sight.

Ellrich and Mason jumped on their machine and gave chase. The speedy motorcycle was rapidly gaining on the truck, when suddenly three men on the truck and two in the touring car opened fire with pistols. The shots had the effect of slowing the chase somewhat, as the officers returned the fire.

As the cars, belching fire, passed the corner of Fifty-third and Haverford avenue, Patrolman William Eichelberger fired five shots at the touring car. This was returned by a volley from both cars, which did not hit the patrolman.

When the cars had reached the corner of Sixty-first street and Haverford avenue, the noise of the firing attracted the attention of the firemen in the engine house attached to the Sixty-first and Thompson streets police station.

They ran into the street and were greeted with a fusillade of shots which drove them back into the engine house. The shots also roused police and motorcycle crew of the Sixty-first and Thompson streets station, who joined in the chase.

The wild dash continued to Sixty-sixth street and Haverford avenue, where the two mysterious cars dashed into Delaware county. This did not stop the police, however, who continued the trail, keeping as near as the constant rain of bullets permitted. The four motorcycle patrolmen kept up a constant fire, too, in an effort to stop the cars. As far as is known none of the shots took effect on the bandits.

When the cars got into a stark part of Llanerch, they suddenly extinguished all lights and sped away in darkness. After the firing had stopped a careful search failed to disclose any one who had been hit. The police are at a loss to account for the murderous resistance unless the men were in stolen cars or were conveying contraband liquor.

THEY'RE ALL AWAY!

An Idle Day at City Hall With Offices Closed and Dark

Mayor Moore is passing Labor Day at his Island Heights cottage, perhaps with his feet on the porch rail, busily engaged in forgetting the Varsity until the whistle tomorrow. His secretary, Durell Shuster, is communicating in Ocean City. The Mayor's office is dark.

All the executive offices and city departments with the exception of the Bureau of Police are in a state of suspended animation concerning events with the dark and lazily flapping flags on City Hall.

SUSPECT QUIZZED IN DOUBLE MURDER

Police Question Man Who Lived Near Couple Slain in Grocery

NEIGHBORS FRIGHTENED

Glenn Schell, a young man who came here several months ago from Kentucky, was taken to City Hall today to be questioned in connection with the murder Saturday of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Wallenbach, 523 South Randolph street.

Schell, who is a Negro, was arrested yesterday on a technical vagrancy charge, and given a hearing today before Magistrate Albert H. Brown. He was held under $5000 bail for a further hearing next Monday.

The prisoner gave two addresses, 528 Kater street and 524 Reese street. The second house is at the rear of the little store where Wallenbach and his wife were slain.

The police did not explain why they thought Schell might know something about the crime. He did little talking after his arrest. He said he had been visiting another man at the Reese street house. This man the police believe is a Negro, known as "Chickie" Johnson.

Think Couple Had Money. Nathan Gross, a clothing dealer at 523 South street, told the police today he had known the murdered man intimately. Wallenbach frequently had visited his house.

"Some time ago I gave Mr. Wallenbach a gold watch to keep for me," said Gross. "I believe he had money. I gave him some flannel once, and she made her husband a money belt out of it."

Search for the murderers of neighbors to tell what they know. The police are firmly convinced that many of those who have been questioned could give most valuable information if it was not true for fear of a like fate.

This is particularly true, detectives say, of Max Lipschutz, an aged roomer at the Scott Handolph street house. He has been repeatedly questioned and is kept under constant surveillance.

There is no suspicion that Lipschutz is guilty of the crime, the police say, but they do think he knows more about events leading up to it than he has occasion to say. They say that on one occasion, nearly broken by the constant questioning, he blurted out:

"I'd like to tell you who killed them, but I can't—I can't. Maybe I can help you later."

Was Locked in Room. During a talk with the detectives Lipschutz said that when he awoke at 9:30 o'clock Saturday morning and started out for his breakfast he found his door had been latched on the outside.

After he had pounded and called for some time, Mrs. Wallenbach came and released him.

The woman was just seen alive somewhere about half an hour later, when her husband returned from the synagogue. Both were murdered in the little store, the slayer using a brick, a heavy brass candlebram and a sharp knife.

Dimond Alexander, a Greek, who also occupies rooms above the store, was again questioned concerning events prior to the murder. He insisted that he left the house early and returned just before noon to find the bodies lying in the store.

Boy Killed by Horse's Kick. Peekskill, N. Y., Sept. 5.—Giving an old farm hand a farewell pat as he was about to start home after his summer vacation, sixteen-year-old Coldridge Beale, son of Dr. James Beale, of Peekskill, was kicked and instantly killed yesterday on a farm in Furnace Woods Village, a suburb of Peekskill.

LAST HOMEWARD RUSH STARTS FROM SEASHORE

300,000 Excursionists Will Swamp Ferry Facilities During Day

Upward of 300,000 one-day excursionists, week-enders and vacationists, returning from Atlantic City and other New Jersey resorts, swamped the Camden ferries beginning at 3 o'clock this afternoon, and will continue to jam them until early tomorrow morning.

For four days the pleasure-seekers have been pouring out of the city bound for the shore. Ferry and railroad facilities, weary from the hustle and bustle of handling the shore-bound crowds, were all but swept off their feet this afternoon when the tide turned and the advance guard of the homecomers was whirled into the Camden terminals of the Reading and Pennsylvania systems.

The Reading Railway took 187,000 persons to the shore resorts Friday, Saturday, yesterday and today. In addition to the holiday army will be thousands who have been living at the shore all summer and are vacating their cottages and apartments. They are the dread of Harry W. Cooper, a division superintendent of ferries for the Union Transfer company, who has the task of straightening out the baggage tangles of the returning cottagers.

An enthusiastic cheer went up when the spectators thought they recognized President Harding. Chief Jervis sensed that mistake had been made, and turned down his coat collar and raised his hat, so that they saw their error.

George Christian, the President's secretary, was here today and had been confident that the message came from Washington that his chief would arrive.

Mr. Christian, George Van Fleet, manager of Mr. Harding's publishing concern at Marion, O., and Mrs. Van Fleet arrived at the shore today. They were welcomed by Senator Johnson and Hitebeck also were here to welcome the President should he arrive.

Had Pleasant Golf Foursome. A golf foursome had been arranged for the chief Executive at the Seaside Hotel last night when word came from Washington that his chief would arrive.

Mr. Christian, George Van Fleet, manager of Mr. Harding's publishing concern at Marion, O., and Mrs. Van Fleet arrived at the shore today. They were welcomed by Senator Johnson and Hitebeck also were here to welcome the President should he arrive.

BIG SEAS PREVENT PRESIDENT'S VISIT TO ATLANTIC CITY

Nor'easter Makes It Dangerous to Land, So Mayflower Proceeds to Washington

DISAPPOINTMENT TO CROWD AT SHORE FOR LABOR DAY

Atlantic City, Sept. 5.—President Harding abandoned his plans for visiting this resort today when the high seas of a nor'easter made it impossible for his party to transfer from the yacht Mayflower to the submarine chaser 71.

The news was received by Richard Jervis, chief of the Secret Service men sent in advance to Atlantic City. He went out on the submarine chaser today in an effort to get in touch with the presidential yacht, which had been reported lying off the New Jersey coast.

The chaser returned shortly after 11 o'clock, following an hour's cruise which had been fruitless. Some time after the chaser returned Chief Jervis received an official message stating that the Mayflower was returning to Washington, as it had been impossible to land.

The failure of President Harding to stop at Atlantic City caused great disappointment to thousands of Labor Day visitors, who had waited many hours for his coming. From early morning the Boardwalk had been crowded with throngs eager for a glimpse of the yacht.

Every craft which appeared on the horizon's rim was hailed as possibly the Mayflower.

Waiting Throng at Inlet. The press at the Inlet was particularly great. It had been planned to transfer President Harding and his party from the Mayflower to the submarine chaser, in command of Ensign J. Donoghue, off the coast, and bring them into the Inlet on board the smaller craft. The Mayor flower drew too much water to make it safe for her to attempt crossing the bar at the Inlet.

This morning the sky was overcast with heavy clouds, a strong wind blew from the northeast, and the sea was kicked up in an angry cross-chop which made it unsafe for a boat to attempt a perilous undertaking.

When the submarine chaser steamed back to the Inlet after her search of the sea for the President's yacht, the crowd mistook Chief Jervis for the President. He came off accompanied by several other members of the Secret Service, and the eager spectators believed it was the President with his escort.

An enthusiastic cheer went up when the spectators thought they recognized President Harding. Chief Jervis sensed that mistake had been made, and turned down his coat collar and raised his hat, so that they saw their error.

STARVED RUSSIAN HORSES DROPPING BY WAYSIDE

SAMARA, RUSSIA, Sept. 5.—Hordes of families were leaving toward Samara when the Associated Press correspondent passed through Samarkand. They were carrying all their belongings on rickety wagons drawn by starved horses which were dropping dead by the wayside. One Kuznetsov, a peasant, was found standing with his wife, grown daughter and young son watching their horse die at the top of a long hill. He told a correspondent that with those of thousands of other families they are trekking from the famine area, carrying up with them "life is hard."

TRY 4TH TIME TO ROB HOME

Thugs Scared Away When Woman Calls for Help. Early this morning, for the fourth time in ten days, an attempt was made to rob the home of Mrs. Mary Adams, 2342 Oxford street. Mrs. Adams was awake at the time and saw four men drive up to her home in a motor car with all the windows and doors on the first floor. She called for help and awakened her two daughters, Florence, eighteen years old, and Helen, sixteen. The intruders were armed with the axes and escaped in their automobile.

IRISH CRISIS GRAVE; FURTHER PARLEY UP TO LLOYD GEORGE

Sinn Fein Unyielding in Latest Reply—Demand "Consent of Governed" Basis

PRESS, FEARFUL OF BREAK, STANDS FOR MODERATION

By the Associated Press. London, Sept. 5.—Members of the British Cabinet will be called upon to decide Wednesday either to continue negotiations with Sinn Fein Ireland on the basis of "the consent of the governed," or issue an ultimatum to the Irish Republicans to accept or reject the Government's proposals.

The reply of Eamon de Valera and his associates to the latest note from Prime Minister Lloyd George, made public here yesterday, did not break off negotiations with the British Government, but it was admitted here today that the situation had lost none of its gravity. No thought of retreat is expressed in the Sinn Fein reply.

Dispatches from Ireland reflect a desire of the Sinn Fein to bring Ulster into the Republican fold. Michael Collins, Minister of Finance in the Cabinet of De Valera and commander-in-chief of the Republican Army, spoke at Armagh and made an appeal to Ulster to stand with Southern Ireland against partition.

At the same meeting, Owen O'Duffy, chief liaison officer for Northern Ireland in the Republican Army, threatened Ulster with an increased boycott if the door to the Sinn Fein would be closed, adding, according to report: "If that is unsuccessful, we will bring legions here."

Premier Craig Stands Pat. Sir James Craig, Premier of Ulster, has not shown the slightest indication that he intends to meet the Sinn Fein leaders in person or in conference.

With the exception of the Morning Post, which said: "It is impossible to make terms with a ruffianlike London newspaper this morning made a united plea for forbearance in the hope that a common ground might yet be found. The Daily Telegraph said: "Mr. De Valera's reply, as his previous letters to the London press suggest, the question whether he and his colleagues are likely to appear in the role of practical and responsible administrators. It has been evident the world would be instructed for the work of discussing a settlement on a totally new proposal, and it seems plain enough that any plenipotentiaries nominated by the Sinn Fein would be bound ultimately by what those sending them declare to be an unalterable viewpoint."

"The Cabinet is best able to decide whether there is a possibility of progress despite this letter, and the nation is now completely at one with the Government in its Irish policy."

"Ireland Not Alien Enemy." The last sentences of Mr. de Valera's letter, said the Express, "make it imperative that the door to future negotiations should not be closed by us. Ireland is not an alien enemy. We must look on her as an indigent father regards a wayward son. There must be no return of conflict until all other means have been exhausted."

The Daily Chronicle declared the letter "adds a very 'sheerless' document," adding: "It could never have been written if Continued on Page Five, Column Two."

MOORS KILL 26 SPANIARDS WHO ARE TOO ILL FOR TOIL

Moslem New Year Fails to Bring Forth Any "Great Events". Mellilla, Sept. 5.—(By A. P.)—Morish positions near this city have been heavily shelled, and the Spanish artillerists have been having down heavy bombardment around Goussor, south of here.

Twenty-eight Spaniards taken prisoner at Nador are reported to have been killed because sickness prevented them working. Yesterday was the new Moslem new year, and prior to that event proclamations had been posted in market places, calling upon all faithful Moslems to gather at Nador for the celebration, when "great events" were promised. The French military authorities have concentrated 6000 troops, mostly Senegalese, along the frontier to forestall any possible Moslem attack. They have also dispersed inmates in the French zone of Morocco.

Two captured Spanish cannon which the Moors had mounted along the frontier rendered useless, according to reports received here, by the disappearance of their breech blocks. The gunners in charge of the cannon were punished by death, while the captain of the guard was imprisoned under threat of execution unless the blocks were restored.

Only Two More Chances for Voters to Register

Only two more chances—and both this week—to register present themselves to those who wish to qualify to vote in the primary elections September 20. Tomorrow is one chance. Saturday is the last.

If you don't register, you can't vote, and it is very unwise to put off the duty until Saturday.

Registrars will visit at the polling places in each division from 7 A. M. to 1 P. M. and from 4 P. M. to 10 P. M. tomorrow and Saturday. Assessors will also visit at the polling places from 10 A. M. to 3 P. M. and from 6 P. M. to 9 P. M. so that poll-tax receipt may be purchased.

Remember that a "non-partisan" is a trick that the contractor combine may try to pull over on you. You cannot vote at the primaries unless you are enrolled as a member of a party. The fight is being made on the Republican ticket.
