DOWNEY BEATS WILSON CARDS CRAWL UP IN SLOW, SAD BATTLE, BUT MEANS NOTHING

No-Decision Law in Jersey Enables Camembert Champion to Retain the Title-Whatever That Is-Boys Boxd to See Which Was the Worst

> By ROBERT W. MAXWELL. Sports Editor, Evening Public Ledger

THE only reason Johnny Wilson retains the title of middleweight champion today is because no decision was given at Jersey City yesterday at the end of the twelfth round in his fight with Bryan Downey. The young man from Ohio won a newspaper decision from the champion in one of the most errible, uninteresting, slow, colorless bouts ever staged in any arena. If Lew Bailey ever dared to put on a match like that in the old Broadway, his genteel customers would have torn down the building. Wilson and Downey met in Tex Rickard's huge arena to see which was worse of the two. At the end, both were bad, but Downey was just a he worse of the two. At the end, the rest twas probably all for the best rife better than his opponent. Therefore, it was probably all for the best at an official decision was not handed down. One ham and egg champion bad enough without having another. They say that Wilson was out of condition when he met Downey in that memorable battle in Cleveland. We doubt this statement, because, after looking at the champ yesterday when he was down to weight and fighting trim. we believe Downey would have killed him if he happened to be in poor thysical shape. Wilson is the most sorrowful, pathetic champion we ever tave had, and Mike O'Dowd must have been cooken the night he allowed the title to slip away.

Downey won the battle, but that means nothing. Bryan isn't a star by my means. He is a slow, awkward fighter, possessing nothing but a Western Union right which he telegraphs before letting it go. He doesn't know the meaning of a left jab, his defense is poor, and his principal attack is a wild right swing which lands about as often as the Athletics win a ball game. In ther words, his percentage of hits is about .347.

Were Wilson any sort of a boxer or had he any sort of aggressiveness, would have knocked Downey stiff before the battle was half over. The blean would swing wildly and, after missing, fall out of position. He ually would fall to the floor or try to dive head first through the ropes. here was nothing graceful about his work nor was there anything that led mybody to believe he was a finished boxer. He was just a slam-bang preninary fighter who should have been paid $10 a round, and Wilson was worse,

It IMING from the form they displayed yesterday, it's a cinch that Benny Leonard could have stepped into the ring and walloped the out of both of them. An for old Mike Gibbons well, Mike wouldn't have to even exert himself.

Wilson Almost Blotted in First Round

TOBODY knows how many cash customers were in the place, because the arena was so large that it was difficult to guess the number of seats Guesses were made all the way from 10,000 to 35,000 and it is said that income tax men collected on 23,500 tickets. However, no matter how many were present, every one was dissatisfied.

bout almost was a popular one, because it looked in the first round that Wilson was going the voyage. Had Johnny stopped a good sock in the whiskers in that session and taken it on the hip, we wouldn't have been forced to sit through the other eleven stanzas. A sudden ending like that would have enabled Downey to keep his secret and everybody would have said was a great fighter. Wilson, on the other hand, would have been referred to as an unfortunate ex-champion instead of one of the Camembert variety. Downey started out to end the battle as quickly as possible. He rushed Wilson, swinging both arms wildly. A swinging right connected with Johnny's chin and the champion's knees sagged. He was all but out and started to fall toward the ropes. Seeing victory in sight, Bryan lost his head completely. He swung without taking aim and missed five wallops in succession. Had he taken his time and measured his man, it is almost certain that he would have put over a haymaker. To make matters worse, Downey would almost fall down after missing a punch. He wasted a lot of time getting back into position and gave Wilson a chance to recover. Even after almost putting the champion away in the first minute, be had another chance before the round was over. Again he connected with his right and again Wilson was woozy. However, the same thing occurred; the anal wallops were wasted and Johnny weathered the storm.

18 seldom that a challenger has two chances in one cound to win the title. Therefore, because he didn't take advantage of those opportunities. Downey has no license to consider himself championship timber. He isn't even a toothpick.

Wilson Spurts, but Foozles at the End

WILSON was careful after the first round. He advanced cautiously and waited for Downey to lead. 5 Downey also was cautious, evidently having been told to settle down and be clever, and he also waited for his opponent to lead. As a result, neither made an attempt to land a blow for fully a minute, and you know how interesting a stant like that is. Downey finally opened up, Landed a couple of punches and took the round.

Johnny boxed better after that and seemed to have solved Downey's strack. He used a right jab to good effect and his left slams did some damage. At that, Downey was a mark for a jab. He would stand with his right fist he'd in front of him, elbow high, dangle it before Wilson's eyes and his left stretched out on the other side. He was as open as the town clock and any celever person could have socked him all over the place.

As it was, Wilson knocked the plaster off his nose, cut him above the right eye, bashed his countenance time and again until it resembled a ruddy sunset. In five rounds Wilson was way out in front, really boxing and showing signs of eleverness. But in the eighth Downey caught him coming in with a hard right to the solar plexus, and after that Johnny made up his mind to stay the limit.

He was on the defensive, allowed Downey to do all of the leading and just stuck around. This probably caused the Jersey commission to hold up his and of the purse because the members thought the champion was not trying. Le this they erred. Wilson was trying hard-to keep from being knocked out. Tex Rickard is said to have lost money on this fight, and if the customers had the faintest inkling of what kind of a scrap the boys were going to put up.

SEEMS a shame to pay a ham like Wilson $35,000 for his services I and $25,000 in Downey when there are so many worth while people out of work and need the money.

Americans Make Clean Sweep in Tennis

THE United States scored a clean-out victory over Japan in the Davis Cup. I matches in Forest Hill, about the same time the terrible offair was being perpetrated in Jersey City, William T. Tilden defeated Ichiya Kumagae in straight sets, and Bill Johnston won from Shimidge three sets to ome. It was a glorious victory for the Americans, but the Japs also were great in defeat It is doubtful if ever a challenging nation ever played such a hard game against such odds. Kumagae and Shamidza never faltered, never quit, attled desperately at all times, and at the end they were on the verge of collapse. They gave all the, had and showed a spirit which gained them hours of friends. It also is doubtful if any foreign athletes ever gained so much opularity as the little sturgy athletes from Nippon. Anybody can be a good inner-it isn't difficult to do that-but it takes a pretty good game guy to take defeat gracefully, after trying in vain to avert it. Shimidza and Sumagae did that, and more power to them.

In his match with Tilden yesterday, Kumugae was near collapse in the third set. He never uttered a word, never gave any sign of distress but hight back the best he knew how. He maintained almost to the end his accuracy of stroke, but his speed was gone. His arms and legs weakened, while Tilden seemed to gain added strength. Shimidgu, against Johnston, lost the first set, but won the second. That yeed to be the running point, for after that he was quable to cone with the filliant game of the Coast star.

NOW that the Davis Cup is all washed up, the stage is set for the national singles championakly tourney at Maskenn beginning Friday. This will be well worth seeing, as all of the store in this and other countries will be present. And tennes is getting to be a popular
