TOPPERS NO LONGER TOPPING; MOTORS TAKE SHINE OFF

Even Beaux and Dandies Don Dusters and Park Caps on One Ear—Auto Vogue Responsible, Hat Salesmen Say

"There was a time," the hat salesman said, "when the man of the world donned frock coat and high silk hat and, with stick on arm, strolled down the street in the afternoon or early evening.

"But now," he continued, "that same man slips his arms into a duster, parks his cap on one ear and away he goes in his machine."

When the family went to the opera not so many years ago father was there with long tails and stiff bosom and a silk hat which closed with a loud and startling pop. But today father jams a derby on his head, gives a reassuring pat to the crown, and he's ready.

Hat salesmen declare that the automobile is responsible for the decline in the use of silk toppers.

"Although we sell a number of silk hats for very formal occasions," said one, "in the last ten years the sales have fallen off by a large percentage. The big man and financier lets the derby take the place of his high hat, and frock coat and dress suit alike are worn with the derby.

"We feel that the automobile is responsible. The man who at one time walked into the store and purchased a high hat drives up today in his machine and buys a cap. Getting in and out of limousines is awkward when a high hat is worn.

On the other hand, a hat manufacturer says that high silk hats are going to find new favor this fall, and he brought forth order blanks on which were 'arger orders for top hats.

"And, incidentally," inquired the manufacturer, "have you ever really watched a man purchase a hat? With much care he selects a model from a shelf and puts it on his head, being careful to strike the right angle.

"And then he struts about in front of the mirror, turning his head first to the left, then the right. He pokes an inquisitive forefinger into the crown to see if it will dent any further, ripples the edge of the brim with his finger tips—wa'k about a bit more to get another angle in a different mirror—a matter of great importance is pending.

"Sometimes he buys the first, sometimes the fifth—but when it comes to hats, a man is as temperamental as a woman."

Woman Burned in Putting Out Fire

Mrs. Emma Dickson, forty-two years old, was burned on the face and hands in extinguishing flames caused by the explosion of a gas stove in the kitchen of her home at 1516 South Bancroft street, at 9 o'clock last night. Mrs. Dickson was treated at St. Agnes' Hospital and was able to go home this morning.

TWO ARMED SUSPECTS HELD

Men With Pistol and Stiletto Taken After Mysterious Shot

Two men were captured at Fourth street and Columbia avenue at 2 o'clock this morning by Patrolman Downing, who pursued them after a shot was fired at American street and Columbia avenue.

At a hearing today before Magistrate Glenn, at the Fourth and York streets station, the men said they were Benjamin Truffia, of Fourth street near Columbia avenue, and James Glette, of Ninth street near Berks. The patrolman testified one of the men carried an army automatic pistol and a razor and the other carried a stiletto.

Magistrate Glenn held them in $500 bail for further hearing September 21, and detectives are investigating the shot which led to their arrest.

Young Indicted In Garwood Killing

An indictment of murder was found by the retiring Camden County Grand Jury against Guilford Young, confessed slayer of Harry Garwood, Camden jitney operator. True bills also were found for receiving and driving stolen automobiles. Benjamin Martin, held as a material witness in the murder charge, was indicted for stealing and receiving stolen automobiles. Young will be placed on trial within the next two weeks.
