Letters to the Editor

The Guy Spiker Episode he Editor of the Evening Public Ledge Bir—After reading the news item in your aper today, which states that Mrs. Guy piker has isft her husband, I cannot refrainform writing to "gloat a bit" over the fulliment of my predictions at the time of hat very strange marriage in Fall River. t two years ago. I said then it would r work out; that it was an impossible to my personal way of thinking), an oral arrangement which would never come right.

And so, sorry though I am when idealists, such as Guy Spiker, find that others will not live up to their ideals. I cannot sefrain from saying, "I told you so."

Most men and women who know anything man nature know that such unnatural of human nature know that such unnatural arrangements do not turn out as we would plan them. Guy Mpiker could not love this woman he did not know, and he could not shut his mind to the facts as they were, that this woman whom he had married had been the mother of his brother's child (and that when his bruther's wife was still living). He simply sould not respect her. course, in the queer triangle, or, call it square, we have yet to hear how has go with the extraordinary wife, for, her sil, of the four in the mix-up, her after sil, of the four in the mix-up, her attitude, the being willing to have the two families live in the same house, was the most remarkable part of the whole thing.

There's one cominent I have to make. however. Guy has shown some good sense when he says. "She can stay away."

Is Man Superior to Woman?

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger: Sir—There is a fundamental instingt in all male animals that forbids them to of-fend the female. It is distressing to see so young women taking advantage of

In conclusion, let's say that man's conmideration for woman is due to her weak-ness and to his inherent sense of deency, and if woman could but accept graciously

On the other hand, I would like to take a fing at the offensive. We ask the writer if she could cook a square meal for a man, or is she one of that sreat army of siris who think of nothing but a man's pocketbook—who need a cook and a maid to do her housework when she gets married?

I hope the writer will do the ex-service men justice and retract her statement against them.

Can't See Benefit

To the Editor of the Eccuting Public Ledger: Sir-Where are the good things that the Sir-Where are the good things that the prohibitionists promised us in those predry days? The biliboards then gave vivid pictures of full lunch and market baskets. Soapbox speakers told how poor homes would vanish and crime and vice would take a long leave of absence: our police force would be reduced and our courts would go on half time. But what have we got? Drug users have increased, and so has the police force, almost doubled, and taxes have also gone up. Thousands of men and women are out of employment, so what have we benefited?

Corrupt Politics

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:
Sir—Thome wisenhelmers clamering for computatory voting sure make one tired. The reason why people will not take the trouble to vote is that they are beginning to lose foith in those who have to do the taking and counting of the ballots, especially the final computations. Here is a case in point.

A party asked me to support him for emination as Assemblyman. I had him I A party asked me to support him for homination as Assemblyman. Refused to Hear Letter to Gompers To the Editor of the Eventag Public Ledger: Sir—At Point Breeze on Labor Day, Mr. Voll. president of the glass-blowers' locals of the United States delivered an address before a thousand or more people. At the close of his remarks I asked him the following questions: Mr. Voll. during your address you said several times that "capitalism must be attacked." Will you tell us the weak part in the capitalist's system? Tell us the strong part of the workingman's costem? Mr. Voll did not make any reply to my questions. I then started in to tell

As no woman ever produced a work of lasting fame in art, science, literature, industry or any other field I think it has been amply proved that man is of superior intelligence. As anybody would rather be tifed by a jury of men then one of women. I feel that men have more consideration for the other fellow than women have. And as the other fellow than women have. And as for being cheap skates, if you ladies feel that you have something on us there, why den't you set a good example and make us feel it?

I am sure that a great number of women have misinterpreted man's consideration for the misinterpreted man's consideration for the affair.

Mummifying of Dead
