Bubby Bully, a bad boy, has banged and smashed the toys, so they com-plain to Judge Sense, He lures Bubby Bully into the Mysterious Garden, but there, when they think they think they have Bubby a prisoner, he rages among them like a giant.

> CHAPTER V Bubby Bully Nibbles

COMETHING had to be done to stop D Bubby Bully from smashing the toys. Judge Sense had lured Bubby into the mysterious garden by tempting him to climb the wall after ripe-red apples, but when the toys thought they had Bubby a prisoner, they found he wasn't a prisoner at all, except that he couldn't get out of the garden. He raged among them like a mad giant or a wild elephant. Woe to the toy that ouldn't dodge his cruel grasp.

"I'll show Judge Sense that some boys know how to use their wits," said Jack to Janet. Jack began to think very hard. "If Bubby Bully wasn't so much larger than the toys, they could make him a prisoner," he muttered. "He isn't much larger than you are then you are boy size," whispered

Remember that, boarding school girls. Sometimes you think that you are above the need of discipline; that it is silly and childish.

Watch out; yeur attitude is going to make your teachers keep an eye on you very carefully.

Again, you have been brought up to feel that if you want a thing you must have it; that if you want to do a thing, you must do it.

It seems to be a question of taste in the majority of cases, this choosing of colors. The one that you are fond of that you think would look the best is the right one. Pink for boys and blue for girls is the way some decide it, while others twist this around, and say the opposite. If the tiny thing has blue eyes, then it's blue that he should wear. Rosy cheeks ask for pink, but truly every baby looks sweet and dear in either color.
