I saw the two Bartow girls the other day on Chestnut street dressed in this way and they looked sweet. Mary's hat and skirt were of henna colored wool and her sweater matched the skirt exactly. Elizabeth who, you remember, came out last year and is fairer than Mary, wore a French blue tweed skirt and hat and a cross-stiet.

DON'T forget that this is the day set for the Arthur Dearborn Smiths' tes, when Virginia will make her debut. tagrat crush. The early teas are always more crowded than the ones later in a season. Every one wants to go when the buds begin to make their bows, but along about the middle of November and on into December you get a bit "fed up" on teas and you are tempted to stay home to read, or write or sew, particularly if the weather is bad.
