

LITTLE BENNY'S NOTE BOOK
By Lee Pape

Me and Sid Hunt are mad at each other on account of different reasons, and yesterday I was sitting on my front steps by myself waiting for something to happen and Sid Hunt came out and started to set on his front out and thinking, G. I wouldn't make steps, in that guy if he came down here with his hands and nose and begged me, in through with that guy.

And I kept on setting there and so did Sid, me thinking, if that guy thinks in ever going to make up with him he thinks wrong, I can't help what that guy thinks.

And I started to imagine what it would be like if me and him both grew up to be men with long pants and everything and we still didn't speak to each other and we had children and our children didn't speak to each other on account of us not, and our children had other children making us have grand children and our grand children didn't even speak to each other for the same reason.

Which just then I looked at Sid and what was he doing but eating a doughnut, which his mother makes peachy doughnuts, and I quick thawed, O well, was the use being mad at a person all your life?

A Clever Touch

She was standing in a trolley car that was crowded, but, right away, you noticed her, noticed the careful smoothness of her brow, noticed the way she stood so erectly, noticed the way she waved and clutched frantically at straps, and took in at a glance the appearance. Upon the next stop at her appearance, you found yourself looking over at her again you decided that the collar and cuffs on her dark dress really had a lot to do with this matter, even as others, they weren't "fussy," but the snowy whiteness of them was made charming by a very full, narrow ruffling that immediately in some marked manner, made them perk and immensely attractive.

The Question Corner

- Today's Inquiries
- How can a funnel for pouring liquid into a small-necked bottle be improvised?
 - What new sort of footstool is most useful and attractive for placing in front of a divan?
 - For engraving what tool has been invented that will perform some thing that has never been done before?
 - What perfumes are best for a gay and vivacious person to use?
 - Describe a charming quaint sleeve for the overblouse.
 - How is a cunning collar for the little girl's dress fashioned?
- Yesterday's Answers
- By adding a little ammonia to the soil surrounding a plant it can be coated to bloom more readily and also present a fresher, greener appearance.
 - A fresh fiber rug, with a design of bright-colored flowers for a border, is extremely attractive in a sun room.
 - For removing ink stains from the fingers, applying the inside of a banana peel forms a simple method.
 - If one has a dominant, straight-forward, self-reliant nature, the perfume that are particularly appropriate to use are geranium, clover mixed with mignonette, or sweet peas.
 - For the new fall suit, a much longer coat and severely tailored lines have come into vogue.
 - Platinum is the name of a shade of gray that is especially striking.

Coat of Fall Suit Is Decidedly Longer

By CORINNE LOWE

The old differences between Tweed and Tweedies become this autumn a minor point of dispute. The agreement on tweed is the major issue. For tweed is one of the most important suit contributions and ranges through a scale of delightful colors, including the blue of the gelsinium.

As a rule these tweed suits are made on mannish lines, with a coat that wanders to the knees or even below. In this case they depend, as do all other severe tailormades, upon cleverness of stitching and upon the exquisite play of the tweed. Often a touch of color is supplied by a boutonniere of crimson or other vivid tint.

But the tweed suit is also inflected with furs and with an occasional plaid. Thus the above pleasant brown tweed shown today has its long waistline crossed by minute plaids, and is heavily weighted with beaver. The tendency to a slight flare shown by so many of the suit coats of the autumn is here intensified.

Adventures With a Purse

NOW, of course you don't run prowling about the shops in search of adventures as does your scribe, but still I will wager that in your pocket-book are all sorts of notes made on scraps of paper—a shopping list maybe, and well—but who would dare to guess at the mysteries of a woman's pocket-book? What I am really getting at is the little note book I bought the other day. It measures, I should say, three inches in length by two inches in width. It has a neat black cover, if not leather then closely resembling it. And it is fitted with a generous supply of paper for memoranda. The nice part about the paper is that each sheet is perforated across the top, so that when you no longer need keep that particular piece, you may easily tear it out, so that your notebook does not become all cluttered up. When the supply of paper is gone a new "filler" may be purchased for paid twenty-five cents for mine, and am delighted with it. Incidentally, if you prefer a larger size, you can get it.

Wash cloths for each member of the family and easily distinguishable one from the other can be had for two for twenty-five cents. They are rough, like bath towels, as all wash cloths should be. I hold. And each has a good clear initial right in the center. They are blue and white, and are mighty good value.

Sale of 1160 Sweaters, Such as We Have Never Had Before in Wanamaker's Down Stairs Store

The qualities are amazing—the values exceed any within our recollection at the average half-price markings of

$2.75 $5.75 $15

Wednesday will be a day of good fortune to every woman who wants a sweater for herself or to lay away for a Christmas gift.

One of the great importing sweater manufacturers of New York has made a clean sweep of all his foreign and domestic models to us at an extraordinary price.

The sweaters—the colors—the almost complete range of sizes from 36 to 44—the prices that in several cases are less than a third of today's standard rates—all make the sale of very unusual importance.

A large number of the sweaters are from a famous mill in Switzerland—the colors are exquisite. Many of those made in America are of foreign materials in delightful colors.

600 All-Wool Sweaters at $2.75

Values of sweaters are pretty well established. According to the market standard of this season all these sweaters are less than half the usual price—and many are a good deal less than half. Among them are more than a hundred hand-knitted Swiss sweaters with elbow sleeves, to be worn as blouses; they have rainbow borders at neck and hips and can be belted if desired. Sixty sweaters are of alpaca wool in a fancy lace stitch in Tuxedo-coat effect with sash; nearly fifty are of mohair wool in surplice style with sash; more than three hundred sleeveless slip-ons are of mohair wool, to wear under coats or for young girls.

500 Artificial Silk Sweaters at $5.75

Many of them imported from Switzerland; others of particularly weighty thread and looking very much like real silk are of American make. They range from one-third to two-thirds less than this season's established price for similar grades.

Three styles, including a lace effect lined with plain fiber silk of contrasting color and two plain Tuxedo coat models in drop stitch fiber silk, all with sashes. Colors are brown, turquoise, silver, taupe, Copenhagen, gold, jade, black and navy.

60 Pure Thread Silk Sweaters are $15

Ten dollars less than our regular price for this beautiful quality. They are simple, rich-looking affairs of heavy real silk in standard Tuxedo-coat effects.

Brown, black, navy, white and a few other colors. Sizes 36 to 44.
