By Lee Pape

Yesterday me and Puds Stinkins and Leroy Shooter was setting on Pudsers front steps and we started to fawk about getting up a club, Puds saying, G, lets get up a club, lets have it down that a grate idea, we can jump or somebody's celler were we can jump or round and make as much noise as we want, lets get it started and then we'll be the founders and we'll have all the say.

G, that's a peach of a idea, I sed, we can have drum bells and Indian clubs and punting bats and everything, G and me went have fun, and nobody else can join unless us 3 agrees. G, we'll have a swell club all rite, us 3 can take turns being president and we'll be in president the other 2 can be secretary and treasurer so we'll all be something all the time, sed Leroy Shooter.

Whose celler shall we have it down? Puds, we could have it down mine any the only reason we cant is because our celler looks sometimes and it nite our celler looks we had down there, I'd spoil everything we had down there, I'd be allowed to have it all rite any our celler looks, G I wish it didnt. Well Id be allowed to have it down mine, too. I sed, only my father comes down to fix the heater so awfen he'd be finding out our secret passwaders and everything in case we didnt heer him coming down, and healy smonks that would spoil the hole thing, that would. My celler would be a good celler to have it down, sed Leroy Shooter, my mother would leave me have it down there, too. Id be allowed all rite any we're all the time having cool put in and every time we had a meeting the coal man would be libel to come and put some more coal in and how could we have any fun with that going on? Being the reasons why the club hasnt bin founded yet and probably the reasons why it probably never will.

Read Your Character

Wrinkles Faces

Wrinkled faces are commonly regarded as signs of age, and this assumption is just close enough to the truth, and far enough away from it, to furnish a splendid example of the way in which instinctively we achieve practical results without scientific accuracy in our natural and intuitive judgments. The assumption is true in so far as age is the measure of experience and wisdom, and no further. Scientifically speaking, wrinkles are not the measure of the number of years which have passed over a man or a woman. They are the measure of the number, kind and strength of their emotions, and of their characters in relation to those emotions. They are the primary, secondary they may indicate simply physical experience, as in the case of the sailor, or man of any other calling which exposes him to the sun and the elements.

Every wrinkle tells its story of character and emotion. Those around the eye reveal one thing, those of the forehead another, and still other traits of character are revealed by those around the mouth and nose.

The wrinkles of the face, therefore, is a negative indication. In the obviously young it is quite natural, for emotional experiences and tendencies, mental and moral struggles, have not had time to write their signatures. But in a person known to be middle-aged or old, lack of wrinkles can only mean lack of experience in the great game of life. At its best it indicates a life void of cares and also of enthusiasm; at its worst, lack of mental and moral ability to appreciate either.

DREAMLAND ADVENTURES

"The Two Mules" BY DADDY

This week Jack and Janet meet Binky Sam, the army mule. Binky Sam is a stranger to them, although well known to those who have read "Dreamland Adventures" in the past.

CHAPTER I

Playing Circus

JACK and Janet were playing with Jack's toy circus. They had loaded the wooden elephant, jointed mule, dodo, the clown, Growls, the lion, and Snarls, the tiger, into an express wagon and had pretended that the wagon was a circus train.

"Toot! Toot!" shouted Jack, and he hitched himself to the train as an engine. "All aboard," cried Janet, who was engineer. "Toot! Toot! Toot!" called the boy-engine and away rattled the circus train out of the yard and down the street. "Toot! Toot! Toot!" It came to the end of the sidewalk and went along the country road. "Toot! Toot! Toot!" It journeyed across the meadow and over the hill, coming at last to a stop beside the deep river.

"Here is a fine town in which to give a show," said Janet, and at once she and Jack went to work unloading the circus train. That didn't take them long.

Jack made the wooden elephant parade around the ring, and Janet whirled dodo, the clown, in dizzy somersaults. "Now comes the trick mule," cried Jack, walking the jointed mule into the ring. "He is the trickiest trick mule in all the country. First he will pretend to be a soldier. Forward, March!"

Jack made the jointed mule walk like a soldier—tramp, tramp, tramp. "Then Jack and Janet noticed a peculiar thing, the sound of tramp, tramp, tramp was much louder than a toy mule could make. Puzzled by this, Jack stopped making jointed mule march. But the sound went right on, tramp, tramp, tramp!"

Jack and Janet looked up. To their surprise a real, live mule was on the other side of a wire fence nearby. And the real, live mule was marching like a soldier, doing just as jointed mule had done.

"Oh, my!" gasped Janet. "We had better take our circus and hurry right away from here. That mule might jump the fence and kick us." But the mule just went on marching—tramp, tramp, tramp.

"He doesn't look like a bad mule that would kick us," whispered Jack. "See how fine he marches. I wonder if he is a trick mule, too." Janet gazed at the mule. He seemed a very good-natured animal, and she made up her mind to speak to him.

"Hello, Mr. Mule," she said. "Why don't you stop marching?" But the mule didn't stop. He went right on marching—tramp, tramp, tramp.

"Stop!" Janet ordered. "Whom, whom, whom?" The mule went on marching—tramp, tramp, tramp.

"You don't say 'stop' or 'whom' to a soldier mule," spoke up Jack. "You say 'halt'!"

As Jack spoke the word "halt," the mule stopped short, standing as still as a statue. Jack and Janet were astonished, for they really didn't think the mule would halt. Then Jack just to see if the mule would mind if he gave another order, shouted: "Forward, march!"

"Tramp, tramp, tramp!" went the mule, marching as he had done before.

"Charge!" shouted Jack, remembering another army order. The mule dashed forward at full speed, galloping around and around. "Halt!" cried Jack, and the mule stopped in his tracks. "At ease!" ordered Jack, for he had heard officers shout that to drilling soldiers. At once the mule lost his stiff soldier nose. He turned his head toward the children, winked an eye playfully at them, curled back his lip in a grin, and let out a bray "Hee-haw! Hee-haw!"

"Why, it is a talking mule," cried Janet. "Say something to us, Mr. Mule. Tell us who you are!"

"(But the mule couldn't say anything to them yet, not until a charm had been worked, and what that was will be told tomorrow.)

Wearable and Becoming New Hats as Low as $3 and $3.85

"Hats that you and I would wear!" one woman who had been looking at them exclaimed to her friend. "I was amazed at the prices." The style of a hat is of first importance. Color and material come second. But, in these hats, all three are well up to standard. They undoubtedly have style and are becoming. Many of the velvets are soft and deep and the colors lovely. It is nothing to see a table full of $3.85 hats that include all these colors: navy, brown, black, dark scarlet, buff, Copenhagen and gold. Even hats with the fashionable corded four-quarter crowns are to be had at these prices. We invite you to see for yourself how much becomingness and satisfaction $3 or $3.85 can procure for you in the way of a hat.

BORNOT Cleaners & Dyers

It's almost time for winter rugs and carpets to go down, and all the spots, stains and dust-dimmed places are going to show up with painful plainness when the lights are lit. The famous BORNOT process of cleaning, however, will remove every vestige of dirt, stain or grease spot; and you will hardly recognize the rug or carpet which we return to you as the one you sent to us. Just a word of advice—before discarding that "impossible" rug, let us renovate it at a fraction of the cost of a new one. It's almost certain that you'll decide it's plenty good enough for another season's use.

A postal or phone call will bring our wagon to your door.
