

MAN SAVES CASH, BUT GETS BEATING

Premont on Makes Grocer Hide Receipts He Generally Carried—Bandits Club Him

FLEE IN TOURING CAR

Five bandits failed in an attempt to get the Saturday night receipts of a grocery store, although they inflicted a severe beating on their victim, early Sunday morning.

Frank Willard, fifty years old, who keeps a grocery store at Fifteenth and Thompson streets and lives at 1423 Brown street with his brother John, had a premonition Saturday night that something would happen to him, so he copied the day's receipts. This money, he hid the habit for years to carry some with him.

When he mounted the steps of his touring car, which had been lurking in the neighborhood all evening, drove up and two of the five occupants leaped out.

One of these men was armed with a revolver and the other with a black-jack. Without speaking a word, they leaped up on the store man, while one held his gun against Willard's head, the other beat him with the black-jack.

Startled and half-paralyzed, Willard jumped out the steps and started running toward the grocery store of David Kominsky, at 1423 Brown street.

Kominsky was still up, and hearing a commotion, ran to the door. He saw Willard, who was running toward the door, and a man in a gray cap and a belt-banded gray overcoat, bending over Willard with a gun at his head.

Willard Kominsky he turned and pointed the gun in his face and Kominsky backed into his store and behind the counter.

Although he had no weapon, Kominsky reached under his counter, as if getting a revolver, and started toward the door. As he did so the men in the car shouted to their companions, who were still searching Willard, and all five drove off as fast as possible.

There is little doubt in the minds of the police that the attempted robbery was a carefully planned affair. From the fact that they did not take his pocket change or jewelry, it is believed the only thing they had in mind was the large sum Willard customarily carries when going home on Saturday night.

Willard was treated for severe bruises by a neighborhood physician. Both he and Kominsky say they can identify the men.

HOPES WILL LAST

Myer Schiff Leaves $10,000 Estate. Sister Gets Most

"I hope this will not be broken," was a phrase in the will of Myer Schiff, formerly a member of the firm of Schiff, Brothers, which was admitted to probate today. Schiff, who died in the Jewish Hospital, left an estate valued at $10,000. Bequests of $25 to $100 are made to brothers, sisters and cousins, the balance going to his sister Rosa.

Other wills probated were those of Walter F. Hall, of 119 North Twentieth street, who left $126,000 and upward to his widow, Mrs. Anna S. Hall; Nicola Pittroia, of 811 Wilder street, left $4000 to relatives; Alexander Russell, of 5010 Hazel avenue, left $4800 to members of the family; and Charles E. Kenner, of 1841 North Twenty-sixth street, devised $7500 to relatives.

Letters of administration were granted in the estate of Edwin M. Carney, of the south west corner of Hancock and Dauphin streets. The estate is valued at $7233. An inventory was filed in the $2067 estate of Henry J. Sosenbocker.

Five Taken in Liquor Raid

Police of the Second and Christian streets station raided the shop of Max Schwartz, at 417 Bainbridge street, early yesterday and arrested Schwartz and four others. The store is owned by Schwartz in $2000 but, charged with selling liquor illegally, and the others in $2000 each.

VETERAN COLLAR BURNS, CROWD FLEES HIS SPEECH

Celluloid Neckwear, of Cleveland Period Threatens to Burn Man's 'Antique' Whiskers

After a man has worn the same collar for years, it becomes more than a collar to him. It is a friend, a companion. That's what makes this little tragedy particularly potent.

There was such a collar at Sixteenth and Walnut streets. It was a celluloid collar, and judging by its design, was cast in the latter part of Cleveland's first term. It encircled the neck of a dignified gentleman with period whiskers in match.

Immediately behind him were two men engaged in close conversation. One meditatively lighted a cigar, and threw the match over his shoulder. There was a flash and a cloud of rich brown smoke—the celluloid collar burst into flames.

Incredible as it may seem, the central figure in the fire remained for a few moments in ignorance of what was happening. The aromatic smoke drifted around into his nostrils. He sniffed the air keenly and turned to look behind him. The conflagration turned with him. He was mystified.

Just then the unwitting incendiary saw what he had done. He shouted to his companion and they both sprang to the rescue. One on each side, they laid violent hands on the blazing collar and tore it out just in time to prevent a forest fire.

The hapless victim stood speechless with astonishment. He gazed upon the ruins of his veteran adornment, then summoning all the powers of a rich and varied vocabulary, he started to talk.

Several women who had gathered to watch the fire beat a hasty retreat, and the other two figures in the catastrophe followed their example. The bereaved gentleman continued for a brief period to waste his eloquence on the desert air, and then went slowly away.
