THAT was a lovely dance which the Graham Doughertys gave last evening at the Philadelphia Cricket Club for their sisters. It's a bit mixing, as to which is whose sister when you hear them taked about isn't it?

And some one told me the other day at Gerrude is Marin's sister and Isabel Grahum's, but it is not so. And it ought not to be hard, because after all. Gertrude Dougherty, who is one of the two for whom the dance was given, has the same last name as Graham, her brother, so that ought to straighten it Graham's wife, Mrs. Dougherty. was Marin Frazer, so it's very easy to realize that Isabel is her sister. I was thinking last night how nice it is that the two sisters are coming out the same year for they can have so many parties together.

They looked very sweet last night. Isabel is quite fair and has blue eyes, and while Gertrude's hair is darker I ould call her a decided blonds, too. She has very blue eyes and wore a frock made of si ver cloth veiled in blue frock inside of silver cloth veited in blue lare, which fell in long points at the hem of the skirt. Silver slippers, blue stockings and a girdle of blue georgette crepe completed her fetching costume.

Isabel was like a dancing flash of light, for her frock was fishioned of that for her frock was fashioned of that newest flame color, which is between an orange and a vermilion, and it was trimmed with gold lace, while she wore gold slippers and stockings.

The New Way to End Corns

The Scientific Method Easy, Gentle, Quick and Sure

A famous chemist, some years ago, discovered a way to end corns. A surgical dressing house of world-wide repute adopted and produced it. Millions of people use this instant relief and quickly rid themselves of throbbing corns. The method is Blue-jay-liquid or plaster. One applies it by a touch. The pain stops instantly, and the whole corn quickly loosens and comes out. Old, harsh methods are supplanted by it. So with corn pads, so with paring.

All such ways are folly. Try Blue jay on one corn now and see. You will be delighted. Your druggist has

Can France Disarm?

Vary from

"France must remain armed as long as her security has not been assured," announces Premier Briand, who is expected to head the French delegation to the arms parley. "No country more than ours desires to limit military burdens," he declares; but he goes on to make it no less emphatically clear that any reduction of the size of the French army must depend upon the elimination of the German menace-in other words, an Allied understanding for the protection of France. Says the Paris Temps, expressing a point of view echoed in dozens of its contemporaries: "The security of France means the peace of Europe. It is a basic condition of economic and political solidarity in the President Harding's call to the Washington Conference says that the question of naval armament will "naturally have first place," altho "it has been thought best not to exclude questions pertaining to other armament." How naval disarmament can end war on land seems to puzzle the French, who recall that Belgium and France were not invaded by a navy in 1914, and who at this moment see the jealous nations of Europe facing each other within easy marching distance. "France has not the slightest intention of abandoning what she considers her just right to security," says Paul Scott Mowrer in October Current Opinion. Unless France can be assured of the moral support of the Allies, "the French delegates will not discuss the reduction of land armament," declares the New York Tribune.

The uncompromising attitude of France in this instance finds considerable support among American editors. But while we find the general attitude of the American press toward France's position to be one of sympathy, in many instances this sympathy is mingled with misgivings. If Premier Briand adheres to his stand, avers the New York World. "then, so far at least as land armaments are concerned, the Washington Conference fails from the start." Equally pessimistic, but less sympathetic, is Mr. Hearst's New York American, which proclaims that "it may confidently be taken for granted that neither Japan. England nor France has the remotest intention of abandoning imperialism or militarism at the Washington Conference," and insists that "the United States should not make any sort of alliance with any other Power or Powers." There is "not a chance" of the United States entering into any such alliance, declares the Des Moines Register,
