

DREAMLAND ADVENTURES

The Home in the Woods By DADDY

(In this adventure Jack and Janet travel to far away wild places.)

CHAPTER I Two Surprises

TOMORROW we shall start for the big woods," said Jack's father. He was a contractor who built railroads, and his work often took him to far away places.

"Oh, then I must part from Janet," cried Jack in dismay. "No," said Janet's father, who was a well engineer. "No, for I am going to help Jack's daddy build his railroad in the big woods, and Janet is going, too."

That made Jack and Janet very happy. They were much excited, also, for they had heard much of the big woods far away and of the strange creatures that lived there. They wanted to see the trees, and the birds, and the animals.

An Amusing Sleeve and a Trailing Panel

By CORINE LOWE

Here in this evening frock of lemon colored georgette a trailing side panel of rose chintilly lace caught with three black satin roses is a feature rivaling in importance the effective sleeves of the same lace.

Jack's father. "But a bear might be too big for him to whip, so we have another dog to help guard you when you are in the woods." Jack's father whistled, and around the corner of the house trotted a fierce-looking bulldog. Jack and Janet were startled for a moment—the bulldog seemed so ferocious. Then they saw a kindly twinkle in his eye.

"Woof! Woof!" said the bulldog gruffly, and he, too, held up a friendly paw for them to shake.

"Johnny Bull isn't afraid of a bear or any other animal," said Jack's father. Yes, it was Johnny Bull, who has been met before in Dreamland Adventures. Jack and Janet liked him as much as they did Toddie Pupkins, though he was not so smily and playful.

Diplomat and Wife Leave The British Ambassador and Lady Geddes, who spent the week-end as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Childs Drexel at their home in Bryn Mawr, returned to Washington last night. Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Van Rensselaer entertained the guests at luncheon yesterday at Camp Hill.

AMERICAN STORES CO. Was He Right?

A famous circus man is remembered by his boast, "There's one born every minute!" He made a fortune, in spite of his practice of "fooling the public," but if he had been a grocer, he would have been a miserable failure. The men behind the American Stores Company have proved, for more than thirty years, that truthfulness pays and quality counts. We secure the best that money can buy, we adhere steadfastly to our quality standard and mark our goods at the lowest possible prices consistent with sound merchandising.

TOO OFTEN we Philadelphians are apt to discount the many advantages which surround us. The man who passes Independence Hall daily on his way to business pays little attention to it and probably does not enter it once a year, while people come from all over the world to visit this Shrine of Liberty. And so I hear of Philadelphians going to New York to purchase a Wedding Gift, while the store of Bailey, Banks and Biddle Company houses the most important collection of Silver in the world. And what gift is so appreciated as Silver? It seems to me to be the most appropriate of all. A beautiful piece of Silver—a Silver Service, a Tea Set, an exquisite Centrepiece or a Chest of Flat Silver will be enjoyed by many generations.

THIS is the season when most people, if they are not fitting up a new home, are at least replenishing their household furnishings or adding new devices and appliances to those which they already possess, and I know of no place where you will be so sure of finding a complete line of these articles than at the store of J. Franklin Miller, 1812 Chestnut Street; from washing-machines, cleaners and fireless cooking-stoves to electric toasters and the smallest kitchen utensils. Then, too, have you seen their fascinating display of fireplace fittings? Colonial andirons of shiny brass with utensils to match, or black firelogs with black utensils, fire screens, wood boxes and good-looking, substantial wood baskets; hearth brushes, and in fact, all those accessories which help to make the fireplace the most attractive spot in the home.
