

Woman's Life and Love

By WINIFRED HARPER COOLEY

Some More Wives

THE old-time wife was an obedient slave. There is no getting around that. However, modern folk are more of the word "obey" in the marriage ceremony. It is not so much a matter of mirrored beliefs of all time.

There is the kind of wife who makes a husband feel his inferiority. She is the type that is a snob in other ways, and with other people. It is she who is the fortune teller. If she has a faint suspicion of the law stress on the fact of her genius, and it is very humiliating to her spouse. One actress that I know is married to a man eminent in his own profession, but of course the civil professions are not so conspicuous as the colorful arts of the stage.

But from the unacquainted I hear from many European countries would say: "Oh, you Americans! How wonderful that your husbands will let you abuse them!" Our international congresses are not held in Europe, for our husbands would let us go to America!

Please Tell Me What to Do

By CYNTHIA

He Should Ask Your Parents Dear Cynthia, I am a young girl of average type, not quite seventeen. I have been going with a young man three months. Now he has asked me several times to go to a show with him, and I told him that he would have to ask my parents. He said that he wouldn't, that it was and in my place to ask, and I say it is his place to ask. Now, dear Cynthia, please let me know who is right.

Objects to Generalization Dear Cynthia, I would like to say a word to "Theodore." My friend and I had our hair bobbed this spring. Almost all the girls I know have their hair cut in the same fashion, and they were varied comments. I am not sure that I am right, but I am sure that I am not alone in feeling that the hair cut is not the best for me. READY FOR THE SEASON

Of course one evening dress is apt to get tiresome, but at least you can start the season with this outfit. The stunning wrap with its flowered silk lining is as gorgeous outside as it is in, and its warm fur collar and heavy lining make it comfortable for the coldest night over the thinnest frock. And the simplicity of the dress of taffeta covered with a network of bugles lends it a distinctive touch which would enable its wearer to "shine" in it.

Read Your Character By Digna Phillips Vital Ears It is strange that in our instinctive character reading we pay so much attention to such features as the eyes and the chin, and so little to the ears. The only people, aside from the scientific character analysts, who pay any attention to ears other than to regard them as either normal or "funny," are detectives and alienists. The former find in them conceptions which serve much in the same manner as fingerprints for identification. The latter are able to determine much in the way of sanity and insanity from them.

DREAMLAND ADVENTURES

The Home in the Woods By DADDY

Jack and Janet are taken by their fathers and mothers to a new home far away in the woods.

CHAPTER III The Land of Indians

WHOO-OOW! Whoo-oo! Whoo-oo-oo-oo! Jack and Janet sat up in bed. They had been startled out of their sleep and for a moment they couldn't think where they were. Below them was a loud roaring and clanking. Their bed was shaking. They seemed to be rushing, rushing, rushing.

They lifted the curtain and looked out of the window. Night had been left behind them. The sun blinked at them through openings in a mighty forest.

"Time to get up! We are almost at the end of the railroad," cried Jack's father, parting the curtains of the berth.

Jack and Janet got up in a hurry and dressed as fast as they could. They finished just as the train rolled into a rough little town beside a broad lake. At a dock close to the station a launch was waiting for them.

They had breakfast in the launch and then climbed aboard the launch. "Dow-wow-wow-wow," barked a dog. "Woof! Woof!" barked a gruff dog voice.

You Find Your Answer to Problems When Your Back Is Against the Wall

Many a Woman Has Fought Through to a Solution of Her Difficulties by Staring With Wide, Tragic Eyes at the Ceiling

WHEN her husband lost his position on an account of a quarrel caused by his own hot temper she did not weep. She was not that kind of wife. Her first impulse was to become sympathetic, even though her heart was like a piece of lead within her.

Then while he went to his desk to write, she left him and went upstairs to her own room. Flushing herself flat upon her bed she lay there quietly, her eyes wide open, tragic, dry.

It was not a time for tears; it was a time for deep thought and decisive plans for action. She had her back, figuratively, to the wall, and she had to fight it.

WOMEN never show their husbands their own rooms, where they can get away to it without danger of being found out. Some of the cleverest ways of combating poverty have been thought out by women whose eyes stared up wildly, sleeplessly at the ceiling.

YOU have a queer feeling of mixed relief and desperation. It is dreadful, it is unthinkable, but at least it has happened; the time has come and you can face it straight out.

For breakfast, oranges are usually served in a bowl or cut in halves or quarters with the rind folded back in a neat form. The customary way is to eat the half-orange in its own natural rind-cup, using a pointed orange-spoon to scoop the juice from the pulp sections. Some people prefer to have the orange juice squeezed into glasses and fruit-iced with milk, sugar and grapefruit. This is eaten with a spoon.

WHAT'S WHAT BY HELEN DEWIE

"Should a Woman Tell?"

By HAZEL BEYO BACHELOR

CHAPTER III Burying the Past WHAT is there about Jane that has kept me from telling him what I wanted so much to tell? Is it a certain austerity, a certain fastidiousness, even a certain coldness that does not make for confidence, the kindest day of my life, and if it were not for a foolish, girlish fancy long since dead, my heart would be filled with nothing but joy.

Well, it is over! I am married to Jane, and the rich and affluent of the last few hours have merged into an intense happiness. It is a joy so great that I am constantly afraid of losing it.

The wedding itself is rather vague to me now, as I look back. I remember nothing clearly but the look in Jane's eyes when I came down the stairs to see her in her gown. Her eyes were so full of love that I felt as if I were being held in a warm embrace.

Tomorrow—"An Unfortunate Revelation" Well, I've decided not to bring up the past. I've decided to keep my mouth shut and let the matter go. I am doing just what I should do. I am not going to think of it again after today. In an hour, however, I shall be in a different mood. I shall be in a mood of love and happiness.

Two Minutes of Optimism

Keep On Keeping On WESTERNERS especially know that the abdest exponent of self-reliance is the hare, lightning's only rival in the field of swift-propelled swift locomotion.

The fact that Jack Rabbit's power of staying on his feet is so great is due to his speed is responsible for one of the most exciting sports in the West—rabbit coursing. The sport begins when the hound finds a warm trail.

There is the end of the most perfect follow-up system ever devised, and the Waterloo of Mr. Greyhound's hopes. Because the chances were at least two to one in favor of Jack Rabbit's escape from the very start.

The reason for the continued good health of some children is simple enough

Especially when you know the facts, some of which are given here

EVERY mother is proud of a healthy, strong youngster that radiates buoyant life and energy. She has reason to be proud, because the child's good health proves her wisdom in the selection of the food she gives her boy or girl.

All mothers should know that growing children require a balanced diet, a diet containing the food elements needed for building and energizing the little body. Grape-Nuts, the rich, nourishing food made from whole wheat flour and malted barley, served with milk or cream, contains the materials the child needs for its best growth and development.

Nature's cure-all

Nature has endowed certain foods with a priceless natural tonic which builds true vitality in the blood. It is called food-iron. Medicinal iron isn't as natural. Food-iron is easily absorbed and effective.

You need but a small bit every day, yet this need is vital. You can get it only in food. Raisins are rich in food-iron. You should eat raisin bread, raisin pie or stewed raisins at least once a day.

Raisins are the Iron-Food. Ask for the SUN-MAID Brand. They are most delicious.
