And, my dears, not alle usually or georgette crepe and are man Club benefit. And, my dears, not only did he talk, but Gilda Varesi was Louisa Wallis wore a frock of emerald there, and she was perfectly charming. quite fluffy.

Louisa Wallia wore a frock of emerald green chiffon trimmed with iridescent sequins at the dance which her father and mother gave for her last evening. and Mrs. Wallie' gown was entirely of black sequins with touches of gray tulle. They gave a small dinner before the dance for Margaret Gilbert, of New York, and Sobie Whitely, of Balti-more, who came on for the party and spent the night with Louisa. Louisa was graduated from Miss Irwin's last year and is very popular. She has dark hair and brown eyes and the emerald year and is very popular. She has dark infaily attained a lady's part, didu't I hair and brown eyes and the emerald go and get a cold in my head, and talk green frock was most becoming, for it brought out her lovely coloring. There was the Austin tea, too, yes.

There was the Austin tea, too, yes-terday, and a buffet supper afterward for the receiving party, all of whom went out to the Wallies for the dance later in the evening. Elizabeth looked sweet in white; you know she is another Bryn Mawr girl. Really it's remark-able how many of the girls are in col-lege. The day of the conventional de-butante is constitute when the audience laughed immoderately when I said, after having waited for long hours in a garden made of boughs and brown paper trees, for the hero to come: "Oh, by belobed, I hab baited laug for dthee." and nearly put the play "on the blink."
