

CATTY IS CHEERED BIG THRONGS ON NAVY VISIT HERE

Mayor Welcomes British Naval Hero at Enthusiastic Reception in City Hall Square

ADMIRAL BEATTY TYPICAL OF SEAFARING TRADITION

Admiral of the Fleet David Beatty on the beach ideal of the seafaring, daring type of fighting sailorman, the incarnation of the spirit of the British Navy, which has been England's first line of defense for centuries.

The admiral was created a peer of Great Britain for his achievements in the Great War, particularly at the battle of Jutland. His official title is Earl Beatty of the North Sea and of Brookly.

Earl Beatty also is first sea lord of the British Admiralty, the branch of the British Government corresponding to the Navy Department in this country. As first sea lord he is the principal professional adviser of the admiral.

The eighty admiral is fifty years old and is an Irishman, although born in England, while his parents were on a hunting trip there. In 1861 Beatty married Ethel Field, of Chicago, daughter of Mrs. Marshall Field, the millionaire merchant.

Earl Beatty, Baron of the North Sea and of Brookly, and admiral of Britain's Fleet, was welcomed to Philadelphia today by thousands of persons who thronged City Hall plaza and the central streets to cheer the hero of Jutland.

The famous British fighting man, the outstanding naval figure of the war, was greeted by Mayor Moore and representatives of the municipal government at the plaza.

After a visit to the Philadelphia Navy Yard and a trip on the river, he was the guest of honor at a luncheon at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel.

The north plaza of City Hall was crowded, and both sides of the Parkway lined with people when the admiral arrived at 11:20 o'clock.

In his honor, the great arch of the north entrance of the hall was hung with British and American flags. British flags were in evidence, too, throughout the crowd, and they were waved vigorously when the noted visitor stepped from his automobile and walked to a platform where Mayor Moore and his cabinet waited.

First in Line to Greet Admiral Mayor Moore, with Richard Wagoner, president of Council, and Director Caven, stood first in the line that waited on the platform to receive the Admiral. Behind them were the other directors and a few distinguished guests.

The crowd swirled all about, though a forty-foot aisle was kept clear by police. Near the platform stood a hundred British veterans who fought under the British flag in the World War.

Behind the crowd of British and American veterans stood a still larger number of admirals who stepped from their automobiles. The Police Band, under Lieutenant Rider, struck up a march as the Admiral strode across the short space to the platform.

Mayor Moore, with his silk hat in his hand, advanced to meet his distinguished guest. The admiral, in a blue uniform, with the ribbons of his many medals and decorations, the admiral had on a heavily lined and a black four-inch-wide sash.

Mayor Extends Welcome to City The Mayor said as she shook the admiral's hand: "With intense gratification Philadelphia, the birthplace of American liberty and the second city in the United States in industrial and commercial activities, extends her greetings to you."

"Your splendid record of activities in the service of civilization and humanity endears you to our people," she said. "You and the freedom of the city is yours. At another time and place we shall have fully expressed to our fellow-citizens our admiration for your career."

However, Forecaster Bliss Promises Weather Will Be Warmer Monday "If you have to get out your coat tonight and find tomorrow morning, providing you live in the suburbs, the milk in the bottle is frozen and the windows are frosted you can't see out, don't get discouraged. Forecaster Bliss has promised warmer weather Monday."

Many persons thought there was a storm last night, but Mr. Bliss says they were wrong. The wind never reached a great velocity than thirty miles an hour. Today the mercury has been hovering between 45 and 50 degrees. The official forecast is: Fair tonight and Sunday; cooler tonight, with freezing in suburban districts; diminishing northwest winds.

WATER MAIN BREAK IN W. PHILADELPHIA

Early Morning Burst Forces Hundreds to Go to Work Unwashed

COFFEE POTS ARE USELESS

There was no water for washing or shaving or to fill the coffee pot this morning in a large area of West Philadelphia, as the result of a worst water main at Fifty-second and Brown streets.

When West Philadelphia residents turned the faucets on there were shouts of indignation and quick telephone calls for the plumber. But the plumbers could do nothing, as the water had been turned off and West Philadelphia had to go to work with dirty hands and faces.

Mrs. Joslin had been confined to bed for three weeks with pneumonia. At 2 o'clock this morning a nurse saw her arise suddenly from her bed and walk toward a window. The nurse hastened after her, but Mrs. Joslin quickly raised the window and hurled herself through it.

The family has been virtually destitute for some time. Mrs. Joslin's husband, who now has the ten children to care for, is unable to find work.

Mrs. Joslin had been seriously ill during the last two weeks. When she was picked up a moment after her fall she was unconscious and died in a few minutes.

BANDIT'S BEATEN AND SHOT IN SALOON

Falls of Schuylkill Crowd Rushes Robber With Chairs and Glasses

WOUNDED AS HE FLEES

A lone, masked bandit tried to hold up the saloon of Jackson & Swartz, at 2301 Cresson street, Falls of Schuylkill, at 12:30 o'clock this morning and was shot twice by a patrolman as he fled from a shower of glasses and chairs.

Police say the bandit, now in Samaritan Hospital, has been identified as Frank "Bunker" Moran, an ex-convict and vagabond, who recently completed a seven-year sentence for post-office burglary.

About fifteen men were in the barroom when the door was pushed open and the bandit walked in. James Jackson, one of the proprietors was back of the bar.

A handkerchief covered Moran's face below the eyes. He pointed a revolver at the astonished patrons and ordered them to line up with their hands in the air.

"Quit your kidding," said Jackson. "The bandit's weapon swung toward the saloonman. 'I'm not kidding,' he shouted. 'Put your up or I'll drill your head.' Jackson's hands went up."

Patron Swings Chair Leonard Grady, 3511 Queen lane, an ex-convict veteran, was the man nearest the bandit. The momentary lullaby with Jackson gave Grady a chance to seize the bandit before he was discharged. Grady turned toward the bandit group of patrons again Grady swung the chair on the bandit's head.

The bandit stumbled forward, although his feet were not discharged. He was arrested by Frank Bradley, 3505 North Thirtieth street, struck him in the face. The handkerchief slipped from his face in his throat.

AFFIDAVITS MADE IN FIRE BRIBE CASE

Evidence Against Two Politicians Is Now in Director Cortelyou's Hands

SEE CONVICTION CERTAIN

Two politicians, one a ward leader who has claimed loyalty to the City Administration, were named in affidavits today as the men who attempted to extort $25,000 from the city.

The affidavits were prepared by Assistant District Attorney Toulson in the private office of District Attorney Rogan. Mr. Toulson personally brought the affidavits to Director Cortelyou.

Warrants based on the affidavits are to be obtained immediately. The arrest of the politicians will follow.

After the affidavits reached the director's office, Mr. Toulson and Mr. Cortelyou conferred for about fifteen minutes. The decision to make the arrests indicates that the District Attorney's office is confident of a conviction on the evidence the Public Safety director gathered.

The scheme, which yielded no money to the alleged plotters, was said to have been hatched in the office of a contractor who had two politicians named who wielded high administrative offices.

A proposition was made to one of the three fire apparatus manufacturers who have branch offices in this city. It was proposed to have the specifications so drawn that the award of the contract would be to the firm consenting to pay "tribute" would be a certainty.

Scheme Bared to Cortelyou The representatives of this fire apparatus company immediately called Director Cortelyou at his office in City Hall, with the intention of exposing the graft effort, though they had given no warning to the conspirators.

Established that the two politicians had the telephone of Colonel Thomas Middle Ellis, who was still Assistant Director of Public Safety at this place, of the city.

Whether the fire apparatus company was used as a device to induce the contractors could not be authenticated yesterday, but it was definitely established that the two politicians made a second proposition to using the contract for $25,000, or approximately 6 per cent of the total money available.

Assurances given by Director Cortelyou, who is considered one of the most able detective chiefs in the United States, that he had the evidence completely in his hands, and that there will be little difficulty in proving a violation of the law. It is almost certain that one or both of the politicians will be prosecuted.

When the Mayor was asked to comment on the report that an effort was being made to bribe the fire apparatus company, he said: "I have had several conferences during the day on this subject, but have placed everything in the hands of Director Cortelyou. Mr. Cortelyou has been making this inquiry and I am sure it will be complete."

BANDS AND BIG CROWD ENLIVEN FRANKLIN FIELD

They were General Smits, who sat neither among the Big Five, nor the Little Five, but who represented one of the major powers, a British dominion; an English college professor, who was an economic adviser, Keynes, who wrote a book; Andre Tardieu, perhaps, and Mr. Hoover, perhaps.

It may be the same way this time. If one were writing a gallery of personalities at the end of the conference, perhaps it would not include, as the one I have written does, Mr. Harding and Mr. Hughes, Mr. Lloyd George and Mr. Balfour and M. Briand.

Some Japanese, Ambassador Shidehara, for example, might take first place in it. One knows so little of the Japanese and the Italian, that it is impossible to list them and describe them. The minor nations seem hardly able this time to produce an outstanding figure.

The Chinese are pretty well known. Wasn't it Ambassador Richard Washburn Child who said of their country that it produced not statesmen, but statesboys?

Adroit Like Lloyd George There is one man of great ability, perhaps the ablest man in the whole conference, placed in the second rank, who may outshine the others when the records are all before the public, and that is Elihu Root, Ex-Senator George Sutherland, of the American Advisory Commission, once described him to me as the "wisest man in the world."

He certainly surpasses all the Americans in the conference in intellectual power combined with flexibility, which fits for negotiations such as these.

He almost equals Lloyd George in All Washed Up The gridiron was washed and dolled up for the occasion. The lines were freshly chalked, and the goal posts stood a new coat of whitewash. The grass was as green as October air, today lured brown and trampled with mud by hundreds of football fans.

The crowd began to stream into the stands early. At 2 o'clock the entire student sections in the south tiers were jammed, and the east stand was more than half filled. The spectators who were fortunate enough to possess reserved seats arrived later.

There were 3000 Lafayette supporters parked in the north stands. They made a lot of noise when everybody else was looking toward the Easton band arrayed in formation as if no one was present in the south section.

Pretty Costumes The Lafayette non-soldiers, about thirty in number, were all dolled up in white flannel tunics, maroon sweaters and white hats. They made a neat appearance.

Elihu Root, Among Wisest at Parley, May Only 'Serve' Adroit as Lloyd George and Superior Intellectually, Former Secretary of State Is Past Age of Ambition

By CLINTON W. GILBERT
Staff Correspondent Evening Public Ledger
Copyright, 1921, by Public Ledger Company

Washington, Nov. 5.—The men who came out of the Paris Peace Conference with enlarged reputations were the heads of delegations from the great powers.

This is the seventh of a series of articles in which Mr. Gilbert discusses the leading personalities in the coming arms conference.

It is old. He is unambitious. His only desire is to serve. All of this, his position and his attitude, implies a secondary role. If Mr. Root had had the desire for service at forty that he has at more than seventy he might have been one of the country's greatest public servants. I have reason to know that he would have accepted the secretaryship of state gladly, had Mr. Harding offered it to him, but that he felt no disappointment when he was not taken.

People said he wished to round out his career, perceiving the interesting opportunities that have confronted Mr. Root. Mr. Root no longer thinks of rounding out his career. There was important work to be done, and he would have, if asked to do it, undertaken it.

He is going abroad to frame the world court as the act of an unambitious man. There was important work to be done and he would have, if asked to do it, undertaken it.

HARVARD OUTPLAYS TIGERS BUT FAILS TO SCORE IN 1ST PERIOD

Brilliant Forward Passing, Buell to Fights, Features Crimson Attack

OWEN GOES OUT OF GAME ON ACCOUNT OF INJURIES

Harvard today left Princeton Tiger football team with a 14-0 lead in the first period, but failed to score in the first period.

Princeton Stadium, Princeton, N. J., Nov. 5.—The snarling Princeton Tiger, stung by defeat in his last two encounters, arose on its hind legs here this afternoon and crashed into old John Harvard. The first period ended without either side scoring.

Princeton was clearly outplayed for the first five minutes of play, and again, toward the close of the period, the Crimson, by a series of brilliant forward passes, Buell to Fitts, threatened.

Harvard set a precedent by appearing on the field twenty minutes before game time. The whole team did not show up, but about a dozen regulars and substitutes, who tested the wind with punts and forward passes. The Tigers followed a few minutes later, the entire team snatching on the gridiron amid a wild cheering from the Princeton cheering section.

Captain Kock and his mates also led in the wild and forward passes and kicks. Five minutes before the game started, Kock called his forwards in their regular and started spirited social drill. A dozen Harvard men generally withdrew to the side lines.

The Princeton cheer leaders called for a yell from the Tiger host for the Crimson. The regular Harvard eleven entered through the north entry three minutes of 2 and, after spending less than two minutes in signal drill, retired to their benches. The stadium was almost filled to its capacity when the officials walked on the gridiron. Harvard students and their band of thirty pieces sat opposite the Tiger cheering section and vied with the boys in pointing the air with fingers. A still with blow from the northwest, giving the air enough zip to make it ideal for football.

First Period Captain Kock, of Princeton, won the toss and elected to receive Harvard's kickoff on the north end of the field. Graham called for Harvard to the arms of Kock on the Tigers' 5-yard line. The Tiger quarterback returned the ball 25 yards before three minutes of time. Kock for Harvard's 15 yards in 2 and. The Tiger punter made 17 yards for holding. Graham made 6 yards through center, then Louie pointed across the goal line. It was a
