LITTLE BENNY'S NOTE BOOK

By Lee Pape THE PARK AVE. NEWS Weather. Unknown. Sports. The new drug store opened last Saturday with a big sign saying 'Special Today a Free Ice Cream Soda with each 50 Cent Purchase, and Puds Simkins and Ed Wernick went around ringing everybody's doorbell they knew and making if they wanted any free or treats to the drug store for anything, the result being Puds Simkins got 13 ice cream sodas and Ed Wernick got 15. Puds being the only one who got sick, one reason probably being because he took a different flavor each time and the other reason probably being that 13 is an unlucky number.

You can't finish everything right away. But the least you can do is begin it. Long Hours Mean Costly MISTAKES

An error in printing is serious. It is multiplied by thousands and all the world to see, appearing on every piece struck off on the press. And in any work so intricate and exacting as the printer's, long working hours invariably result in costly mistakes. A Union Printer working eight hours a day with a half day on Saturdays (44 hours a week) has rest and recreation necessary to keep down cost-raising and quality-destroying errors.

Here's something that will give you an idea of the job that faces the printer: We'll assume that your stenographer has average skill—but with no reflection on her ability—how seldom she turns out a perfect letter. Yet, unlike the printer, she does not have to decide what type to use, to keep the lines even by adjusting space between words and letters, to run type around cuts, to adjust rules and borders or any other of the thousand and one details that are present in even the simplest job of composition. And composition is just a part of printing.

And if the mis-strikes a letter, or a figure, it's easily corrected, or if it gets by, still there's not so much harm done. But an error on composition that doesn't get caught in the proof and appears in the finished product which may likely as not run into thousands of copies is there and can't be erased or conveniently altered.

And errors in printing aren't always typographical ones. There are more serious ones—more serious because they reduce quality and effectiveness, mar the proportions and design, wrong type selection, inharmonious or "off" colors, poor presswork—just a few of the things that can happen to a job of printing in the hands of unskilled or overworked men.

And your mistakes are often corrected. What advertising man or buyer of printing hasn't his neck saved many a time by a printer with "horse sense," who caught a misstatement or other flagrant error in copy that was sent him to set up?

What We Do for Our Members During the period of seventy years that the International Typographical Union has been in existence, it has constantly sought to be of greater benefit to its members and to the printing craft. The wonderful Union Printers' Home and Tuberculosis Sanatorium at Colorado Springs is maintained for its aged and disabled members. It provides a pension for those who are too old to support themselves at their trade. A substantial burial benefit is paid upon the death of any member.
