

JUST GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE

Nancy Wynne Attends the Princeton-Harvard Game. She Tells of the Opening Meeting of the Children's Foyer Dancing Class on Saturday

Did you ever see anything like this? It seemed to me as if it were one long continuous line of motors on the Boulevard and on out the Lincoln Highway. And before I started I saw the greatest number of parties all bundled up in furs and overcoats and veils, getting into cars and going off, all laughter and rosy cheeks and gaiety.

I saw a lot of the debutantes up there. Gertrude Dougherty and Isabel Frazer went with Graham Dougherty and his wife, and Alberta Reath and Dorothy Rodgers, who are great friends, by the way, were there sitting with Fritz Drayton and Harry Neilson. Sarah Starr or rather Logan Starr as she is called, went up with a crowd, and Anne Ashton and her father and mother and several girls and boys were with the game. Helen Hope Montgomery was with another crowd of people. It really seemed as if Philadelphia had moved up to Princeton very speedily. It was simply glorious; the clear, cold air, the songs of the opposing sides, and the general excitement were wonderful, and when Princeton won in the last minutes I thought the place would go mad.

Speaking of debutantes, Janet Holt Strawbridge will be guest of honor at a large luncheon which her mother, Mrs. Holt Strawbridge, will give at the Acorn Club on the twenty-second of this month. Janet is the second of the Strawbridge girls. Her sister Helen came out a couple of years ago and spent last summer traveling in Europe with Rachel Baker and several other girls. Janet is very musical and really studies seriously. She is proficient at the piano, and has decided talent. She is tall and very graceful, with pretty, light hair and brown eyes, while Helen has rather dark hair. I remember at Helen's last party very vividly she made an impression on me, not only because of her prettiness, but she wore a pink frock which was most becoming. The most of the debutantes were white at their time, and while it is very pretty, the pink frock was out of the ordinary and I liked it much.

Several dinners will be given in Janet's honor during the season, both here and in New York, where she will attend several parties.

The death of Mrs. John B. Lennig, Jr. at the Aldine last week took from us a woman long prominent in social affairs. Mrs. Lennig was Miss Emma Louise Clemm, and came originally from Germany. She married Mr. John B. Lennig, and the three daughters of the marriage are Mrs. Robert H. Wickes, who was Maude Lennig; Mrs. Harold Macauley, formerly Elsa Lennig, and Mrs. Ben Rowland, who was Louise Lennig.

Mrs. Lennig died after a long illness. She had been living at the Aldine and had been ill for more than four years, the last year and a half of her life having been spent in Belgium, where the marriage of her daughters, Mrs. Lennig lived at 2013 Locust street, where all three daughters were introduced into society. Mrs. Lennig was a sister-in-law of the late Mr. Nicholas Lennig and of Miss Lucretia Lennig. Her daughters were with her when she died.

Mrs. Stacy B. Lloyd, Mrs. Frank Tracy Griswold and Mrs. George Dallas Dixon, members of the committee of the Women's Board of the Academy of Music, were at the opening meeting of the Foyer Dancing Class, which took place on Saturday morning and which was thoroughly delightful. Besides the waltz and modified fox-trot which are being taught, there is special stress laid on manners. The boys are taught just how to bow and to stand, to sit—in fact, all the little niceties which have been so violated of late. And what's more, the kiddies love it. They did not have much dancing on Saturday, as most of the time was devoted to grouping and a wee curtain tale. Among the children who attended the class were Sallie and Betty Waterman, Mary Lea, Dorothy Fox, Rosalie Stork, Nina Baugh, Mary Harris, George Earnshaw, Billy Goodman, Bob and Seth Hetherington, Harrison Martin, Roberta Pew, Mary Allison Reed, Winthrop Neilson, Jr., William Ziegler and Francis McIlhenry.

MOTHER and Daddy were very excited. You see, Aunt Edith and Uncle Ted had a brand-new baby, and Mother and Daddy wanted Jack to see it and they wanted to be present when he saw this little cousin for the first time. So did Uncle Teddy, and altogether every one was standing round to hear Jack's first wonderful remark of delight about the new baby. Well, they tipped him into the room and to the bassinet and Jack peeped in and looked up into their tense faces and said: "That? That's nothin'."
