

DREAMLAND ADVENTURES

Going Hunting

By DADDY
This week Jack and Janet go hunting in the great woods where they have their home while their fathers are building a railroad through the wilderness. They have funny and exciting adventures.

CHAPTER I
New Way of Hunting

BANG! sounded a gun far off in the woods. Jack and Janet stopped in their play to listen. Bang! Bang! went the gun again. "What is that?" asked Janet. "This isn't the Fourth of July."

"Of course not," answered Jack. "That is the gun of a hunter shooting in the woods."

"What is he shooting at?" asked Janet. "At squirrels and ducks and rabbits and partridge, or maybe at deer or bear," replied Jack.

"I heard the men at the store talking yesterday about going hunting today. I'd like to go hunting, too."

"Would you like to shoot and kill the poor squirrels and rabbits and deer?" demanded Janet. Jack was doubtful about that.

"Well, anyway, I'd like to go hunting," he insisted.

"I heard Mrs. Potter tell mother about a still better way of hunting," said Janet. "Mrs. Potter goes hunting with a camera and maps pictures of birds and deer and bears instead of shooting them."

"That would be fun," agreed Jack. "But we haven't any camera."

"We have drawing sets," she cried. "We can hunt birds and squirrels and rabbits and catch them with our pencils and tablets."

"And maybe we can get a bear that way," shouted Jack excitedly. Janet didn't fancy hunting a bear, but she was eager to go hunting squirrels and rabbits, so she ran into the house to get her drawing set while Jack got his pencils and tablet. Soon both were ready to go a-hunting.

"Ho, Toddie Pupkins! Ho, Johnny Bull! We are going hunting in the big woods," cried Jack to the dogs. Toddie Pupkins and Johnny Bull came bounding to them, barking joyously. The dogs were keen to go hunting. So were Trizzie and Topsy, the Shetland ponies. They snorted and quivered as Jack and Janet bridled and saddled them.

Toddie Pupkins and Johnny Bull ran ahead, sniffing at the ground and trying to find the tracks of birds or beasts. Suddenly Toddie Pupkins let out a yelp, "Ki-yi-yi-yi!" and away he darted down a side path.

And his nose was right. For soon they came in sight of Mr. Hoppity Hop Rabbit, hopping peacefully along. Jack and Janet, riding the ponies, clung tightly to their pencils and drawing tablets. Here was a chance to catch Mr. Hoppity Hop Rabbit.

"Ki-yi-yi-yi!" yelled Toddie Pupkins when he saw Mr. Hoppity Hop Rabbit. Mr. Hoppity Hop Rabbit, who had started looking around and away he went in mighty bounds—bounds that carried him over the ground so fast he looked like a streak.

"Stop!" cried Janet. "Stop, we want to draw your picture!" But Mr. Hoppity Hop Rabbit didn't want to stop to have his picture drawn while two lively dogs were yelping after him. He dived into a brush patch and vanished from sight. When Toddie Pupkins and Johnny Bull got there he was down in his burrow far beneath the ground, chucking over how he had gotten away from the dogs and hunters.

Jack and Janet were much disappointed. "We made a mistake in letting the dogs go ahead and scare Mr. Hoppity Hop Rabbit," said Jack. "We will have to hunt like Indians and be very, very quiet."

(How they fool Perky Squirrel will be told tomorrow.)

Gwan-to-Bed Stories By J. P. McEVoy

ONCE upon a time, dear children, there was a darling little monkey named Maurice. He lived all day on the end of a string and he danced on the sidewalk to a lot of silly songs played by his master, Joe Gasobo, on a fuddy-duddy hand organ.

Although Maurice danced and capered about all day, nevertheless, away down inside of his little monkey anatomy he was very sad. He wished to do something more noble, more worth while than merely making comic little gestures all day long.

"How wonderful it must be to be a man," Maurice would say. "How I would like to be one of those big, important-looking business men," and then he would shake his head and a little tear would fall on the sidewalk with a splash.

ONE day when Maurice was feeling particularly bitter and wishing more than ever that he could be a business man, Joe Gasobo took Maurice and his hand organ down to the business section of the city, and while he was playing near one of the largest office buildings, Maurice suddenly jerked his string out of Joe's hand and climbed up the side of the building. He stopped on the ledge of a seventh floor window and looked inside. (Dorothy, would you mind taking the dog's ear out of the baby's mouth? Thank you for both of us.)

There he saw a business man seated at his desk. The man picked up some papers, looked at them, and threw them down. Then he grabbed up a little stick and scratched the papers madly. Then he picked up something black and held something else to his ear and made awful faces into the black thing. Then he sat down in his chair and spun around two or three times, picked up more of the papers and piled them up, then tore the pile down and threw most of them on the floor.

MAURICE watched him a long time. First, he was puzzled, then he was surprised and finally he was terribly disappointed. "So that's a business man at work!" he said. "Why, there isn't any more sense to that than there is to my funny little gestures at the end of my comic little string. If he hasn't any more sense than to sit there making faces into black things and picking up papers and throwing them down all day, he's a bigger monkey than I am."

So saying Maurice climbed down and went to work with new contentment in his heart. "I'd rather be a monkey," said he. "I do this because I have to, but I know better. That fellow doesn't know any better, poor fish."

But Maurice was wrong. Your daddy was the man whom Maurice watched through the window, and he does know better, but he must make pork chops and shoes for your children. Maurice hasn't any children, and if he had they wouldn't eat pork chops and they wouldn't wear shoes like I am."

And that's the end. Gwan to bed.

FIG. 1—A Square by Moving One Match. Here is a clever little puzzle which is practically unknown and which will tax the brains and ingenuity of every one. Arrange four matches as shown in Fig. 1, forming a cross. The problem is to move one match and make the matches form the sides of a perfect square.

The solution is shown in Fig. 2. The square is quite perfect, even though its size is smaller than expected. Move match four.

We Blended Palm and Olive Oils To beautify your hair

This free 15-cent trial bottle contains ample quantity for one luxurious shampoo, no matter how heavy your hair. Use it and watch results. See how soft it makes your hair, and how fluffy. Admire the attractive, well-groomed gloss. Notice how clean it leaves your scalp, how all scurf and dandruff are completely removed. Ordinary shampooing doesn't get these results. They are due to palm and olive oils. lather which softens the scalp and reaches every root and hair cell. This lather loosens the dandruff scales, dislodges and dissolves them, leaving the scalp and hair free to function healthfully. Prevents Baldness. This thorough removal of dandruff, which doctors call seborrhea, is most necessary, as even the accumulation on healthy scalps injures the hair. The dry, oily scales clog the roots of the hair, preventing proper nutrition. Soon the hair begins to fall out. Ordinary washing has little effect, often seeming to make the condition worse. The blend of palm and olive oils you get in Palmolive softens and penetrates the scales, loosening the cap-like accumulation. Gentle massage forces it into the tissues of the scalp, leaving it healthfully purged and clean. Silky texture and satiny gloss. Such scientific shampooing is the basis of beauty, for it keeps both hair and scalp in perfect health. It stimulates circulation, which carries proper nourishment to your hair. It regulates the minute oil glands which give your hair gloss and luster. Hair shampooed with Palmolive is neither brittle nor oily, but soft, glossy and silky. Present the coupon at once and prove that these statements are true. One shampoo with the blend of palm and olive oils begins the transformation.

15c TRIAL BOTTLE FREE Present this coupon, with your name and address filled in, to any druggist. It is good for a 15-cent trial bottle of Palmolive Shampoo.
