

Cornell Has Powerful Team Says Penn Scout

LOCAL PROS PLAN OWN GOLF BODY

Tredyffrin Tournament Brings Ideas Forward—Barnes Qualifies as "Fast Golfer" to Win, "DOLLAR-A-MINUTE" PAGE

By SANDY McNEILICK. Well the thing has been done and something has been started in the local golf world. That was always the main thing to get it started.

But at Dook, Pa., one-day golf tournament was played over the links of the Tredyffrin Country Club yesterday.

The first idea was to make it for the local professionals. This was to let in professionals from other clubs and further to take in any amateurs that cared to compete.

The event was called the "Main Line Open Championship." Today Jim Barnes can tack that title onto his other ribbon as champion of the United States.

"Big Jim" broke the record at Tredyffrin, turned in a total of 140 and it was good enough. The tournament was a huge success in every way.

It encouraged another tournament of the same sort for next year, and it went further. It crystallized, in a way, long-talked-of plans.

These plans go back a bit. For some time there has been talk locally that Philadelphia professionals have not been doing better in the big tournaments for the reason that they get so little competition.

Now the talk is to form a local organization of the professionals, with officers and small dues, etc., similar to the ones already formed in Boston and Pittsburgh.

Here in town it is now proposed to form a Philadelphia Professional Association, to hold semi-monthly tournaments and to play on various courses.

It is felt the courses will be thrown open, once there is some definite organization.

The local pros, as well as the outsiders, ganged around. They had a chance to talk things over, and the local pros, as well as the outsiders, ganged around.

RED AND BLUE FACES TWO HARD STRUGGLES

Big Red Team From Lake Cayuga Stronger Than Pitt and Lafayette, Aserts Tom McNamara

WATCH DARTMOUTH

PENN scouts and graduates who witnessed the Cornell-Columbia game last Saturday are a unit in declaring that the Red and White has one of its greatest teams since Charley Barrett helped make gridiron history on the shores of Lake Cayuga.

It will be remembered that this same Barrett was the main factor in the last gridiron victory of the eleven from the shores of Cayuga over a Penn team on Thanksgiving Day.

According to Tom McNamara, the Penn scout, the Ithaca has one of the fastest teams he has seen in action this season.

"I really think," said McNamara, "that Cornell has a more powerful team than either Pittsburgh or Lafayette. The Ithaca team moves as a unit, eleven men in play all the time, and they are in good position to win any game they play."

A Veteran Eleven. THEY looked awfully good to me tonight. I think that Dobbie has a mighty fine eleven. The team is a veteran one, but also includes many of the freshmen team of last year.

"Cornell doesn't count its season a success unless the name of Penn is tacked on the list of those defeated," said McNamara.

Harvard Students Can't Take Sweeties to Game

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 8.—Many a Harvard man is due to lose his sweetheart as the result of a ruling just made by the Harvard Athletic Association in reference to tickets for the football game with Yale.

The Harvard management decided to cut down 5000 applicants who asked for two tickets, and give them only one. Perhaps more than one-third of these are undergraduates, and nearly every one of them has asked some girl to spend the afternoon of November 19 with him on the shores of Lake Cayuga.

But the bigger shock for the student is yet to come. He must tell the lady of his heart that he cannot keep his engagement. Looks as if there will be many an aching heart at Harvard and the immediate vicinity.

New York, Nov. 8.—The Notre Dame football team, which trimmed the Army eleven at West Point, 28-0, on Saturday, will line up against Rutgers at the Polo Grounds here this afternoon.

The Westerners are confident of handing a defeat to Foster Sanford's team. Knute Rockne, the Notre Dame coach, stated this morning that he did not expect Rutgers to measure to the strength of West Point.

Sanford says he is sure he will be able to give the Notre Dame players something to worry about. He expressed particular confidence in the ability of his linemen. However, the first defense will be handicapped through the absence of Knute at the regular center.
