CHAMPIONSHIP MAY HINGE ON RESULT OF STATE-NAVY BATTLE

Folwell's Middy Eleven Has Clean Slate, While Bezdek's Team Was Tied by Harvard-Penn Needs More Players Than Plays

By ROBERT W. MAXWELL

Sports Editor Evening Public Ledger WHEN Penn State collides with the Navy on Franklin Field next Saturday afternoon thousands of our well-known citizens will have a chance to gaze upon what might turn out to be a championship contest. It has been years and years since there has been an occasion like this, and the aforesaid well-known citizens should take full advantage of it.

Seven years ago we had a World Series here and the Athletics were one of the performers. The next year the Phils put on a championship act and then the curtain was lowered. The Army and Navy used to battle in this city for the service championship, but New York grabbed that fall classic and we were left high and dry.

Now we will have another real, regular, high-class contest between two football teams worthy of a second glance. We will have an unusual opof other cities to get the teams. This shows efficient management or something like that, for our public MUST be pleased. Counter-attractions must be obtained while the "Big Three" are fighting among themselves. The occasional reference to the "Big Three," meaning Harvard, Princeton and Yale, has been objected to by some of our readers because it is claimed that those three teams no longer stand out as the best. This is very true. They don't. But they might be slightly better-and we don't wish to start an argument-than our own private and municipal "Big Three," which is another way of referring to the Phillies, Athletics-and

As a couple of imported teams play a football game here next Saturday, let's take a look at the dope and find out what it is all about. On one side we have Penn State, coached by Hugo Bezdek, and one of the best teams in the country. Last year the team went through the season without a defeat, beating Dartmouth and Nebraska and playing a scoreless tie with Pittsburgh. This year not a game has been lost, the most notable performances being a victory over Georgia Tech and a 21-to-21 tie with Harvard.

TUDGING from the upsets we are having every week, it is beginning to look as if State would be seriously considered when the championship of the East is being determined, and this makes the battle with the Navy all the more important.

Folwell Has Great Offense

THE Navy has had a fairly easy schedule this year, but the team arose to the heights and demonstrated it was one of the best on the day that Princeton journeyed to Annapolis. The Tigers had been going good, had not tasted the bitter dregs of defeat and looked like easy victors. However, the Middles won by the score of 13 to 0 in a game which was more one-sided than the score indicated.

On that day the Navy did something that never has been done before. Princeton was shut out, whitewashed, blanked and calcimined not only in the official figures, but also in the matter of making first downs. Not once did the Tigers make the necessary first down in the sixty minutes of actual play and statisticians will find that this is the first time any team, with the exception of Yale or Harvard, ever has been able to do it.

All of which speaks well for the Navy defense. They say at Annapolis that up to last Saturday no team in three seasons ever has made a first down on plays directed at the line between tackle and tackle. This, too, is a great record and one to be proud of. Therefore, it easily can be seen that the Middles are hard to gain ground against and Penn State will have to do some tall hustling.

On the offense the Navy is brilliant. This is because Bob Folwell is the coach, and Bob certainly knows how to dope out plays which will gain ground. He has a system all its own and made a great record at Washington and Jefferson and at Penn. His short forward pass still is good and just as hard to stop, and his running attack is brilliant. He has a flock of backfield men to insert when necessary, and the reserves are just as good as the regulars. Folwell has a great squad this year and expects to go through the season without defeat. This also makes Saturday's game more interesting.

Here is another angle which might be worth mentioning. This is the only chance Folwell has had to get on Franklin Field since the season of 1919. After that year Penn decided Folwell was not good enough to coach the team and gave him the gate, which is slang for taking the air. Since leaving all he has done is turn out two of the best teams the Navy has had in many

With Penn State conditions were reversed. When the schedule-makers got together after last season it was decided that State was entirely too good football team to be pitted against Penn and was dropped to make way for Franklin and Marshall or Gettysburg or something like that.

THEREFORE, we have a coach who was not good enough and a team that was too good meeting on the same day and on the same field where the bars once were put up.

Penn Has Chance to Come Back

DENN'S record this season isn't so bad as it is being painted. Seven games have been played, four have resulted in victories, two have been defeats and one was a tie. The defeats were administered by two of the best teams in the country-Pitt and Lafayette-and no eleven has to bow its head because wins put over by the Panthers and the Maroon. Harvard is rated as a fairly good team and Princeton's standing is better and yet both of these elevens have been beaten twice.

The Quakers still have a chance to redeem themselves. Dartmouth is layed on the Polo Grounds next Saturday and a victory in New York for the Red and Blue will make Penn men forget about Pitt and Lafayette. Cornell, as usual, will appear here on Thanksgiving Day and unless Heismen's athletes show remarkable improvement, the Ithacans will triumph for the first time since 1915. Then, again, it must be remembered that Cornell also has a top-notch team that was too good for Dartmouth and Columbia.

The dope seems to point to Penn having a fifty-fifty chance of beating Dartmouth, but it would be the biggest upset of the season if Cornell fails to win here, although tradition and all that is against a Red and White eleven triumphing on Franklin Field. Year after year Cornell has come down here with good teams that have gone home beaten. The Ithacans have won a few games on the Quakers' playground, but they have been mighty few. It is not so much that Penn needs new plays as new players. This is just an off year at the Quaker institution, one of those seasons that come to every institution when the material is not up to the standard. The players are game, no one can question that. They have fought every inch of the ground rained against them, which means that they have done a heap of fighting. The spirit of the team is typified in little Rex Wray, the captain, who played through three games with a pair of broken ribs. Any player who does this is certainly giving all he has and nothing more can be asked.

Penn was unfortunate in losing a number of good players from last year and also several of the freshmen who were expected back failed to put in an appearance at the first rollcall. Now it is a matter of waiting until next year new material. Ir. Keogh's freshman eleven has some excellent players in their line-up and these boys will help out in 1922.

THE Quakers have had some tough luck this season with injuries and this has handicapped them to a great extent. This should be taken into consideration by the gentlemen who swing hummers. Copyright, 1921, by Public Ledger Company

For the first time since we have have been over in this country we had o work to win a match.

"As a summary of the match, about the best thing that I can say is it was a jolly well-played game." Ninth Victory

Yesterday's game marked the first time that an American team scored more than one goal on the invaders since their coming to this side of the Atlantic. The team has played nine games, and in that time had tallied 141 points to 7 for their opponents.

Holmesburg and Quakers Are After New Players

Manager Fred "Pop" Gerker, of the Holmesburg football eleven, and Leo Conway, of the Philadelphia Quakers, are both negotiating with star players to join their respective elevens for the big Armistice Day game at the Phillis Ball Park on Friday afternoon.

Both feel certain of securing the men they are after, but refrain from making any definite announcement until they finally consent to play in the contest.

Holmesburg expects five new players, while the Quakers are after two, one of whom is Pat Smith, the big fullback of the Buffalo Panhandies, for whom many of the Quakers play. Buffalo defeated Jim Thorpe's leveland team on Sunday, 10 to 0. The fact that Holmesburg held Annapolis, Nov. 8.—Interest at the Naval Academy in next Saturday's game at Philadelphia between the Middles and Penn State is hardly exceeded by that which precedes the annual game against the Military Academy.
