

FRIENDS' QUARREL ENDS IN KILLING

Dispute Arose Over Twelfth Street Merchant's Resemblance to Saint

CAPTURE ACCUSED MAN

Donato D'Orazio, a drygoods merchant, of Twelfth and Ellsworth streets, was stabbed to death last night, police say, by Tionetti D'Orazio, Ellsworth street near Thirtieth, during an argument over Tionetti's resemblance to St. Martin, whose feast is being celebrated today.

The slain man was the father of John D'Orazio, twenty-two-year-old bank employe, who sought to get rich quickly by embezzling $81,234 from the American Bank and Trust Company, Broad street and Passunk avenue.

D'Orazio, the son, is now in the Eastern Penitentiary serving a two-year sentence imposed October 14 by Judge McCullen after he had pleaded guilty to five indictments charging embezzlement.

Tionetti D'Orazio was not related to the man he is said to have killed, but he is the uncle of Julia D'Orazio, Ninth street near Carpenter, who was the fiancée of John D'Orazio now in prison. The former bank teller was planning to marry the girl and had given her a $500 diamond ring, which she later returned to officials of the local bank.

Proper Fit, Our Aim

Some shoes fit when you try them on, and during the first few days' wearing, then they misfit. Others start right out misfitting and keep it up.

Dr. Reed Cushion Shoes fit when you buy them and as long as you wear them. Our salesmen's first aim is a proper fit, while the shoes are built to retain their shape no matter how hard the wear.

We can fit and suit you.

D'Orazio had been friends for years and had a custom of playing cards together about twice a week. The man later killed went to the other's home last night and a game soon was in progress.

Police say both were drinking wine during the game and that Donato insisted that Tionetti look like St. Martin, the eve of whose feast day was being celebrated in the downtown section.

Tionetti resented the remark and a fiery argument began. It reached a climax, according to the police, when Tionetti reached for a stiletto and plunged it into the other's breast. He then ran from the house.

Police of the Fifteenth street and Snyder avenue station sent the dying man to St. Agnes' Hospital. He died shortly afterward. District detectives, after midnight today, located Tionetti at Twenty-fifth and Wharton streets. He is said to have made a statement to a member of the City Hall murder squad.

The alleged slayer was arraigned this morning before Magistrate Dougherty and held without bail for the action of the Coroner.

ONE hundred and fifty Brand-new Hats for women and young women, representing every up-to-the-minute idea in Millinery at about half the average price—no two alike. Choose any one of them Saturday at... $8.00

THESE are the show-room samples of a famous New York concern (known to almost every woman who visits Fifth Avenue or follows the fashion magazines), sold to us this week at a very special price with the proviso that their name was not to be used and that their labels be removed. Not to do so would be unfair to several other Walnut and Chestnut Streets stores who had purchased many of the same models at the regular prices and have them in stock today at $15.00, $18.00 and $20.00.

A REAL opportunity! Just in time for Thanksgiving and the early winter season to be able to choose from so distinctive a showing of fine Hats at a price which every well-dressed woman can easily afford. At $8.00 each, many will buy two or three to match different costumes. Come in the morning if possible. We shall have a busy day, and the Store will be open until 5:30.
