San Francisco, Nov. 24.—If Fatty Arbuckle's cameraman had been here when the Criminal Court adjourned for a Thanksgiving recess he might have lifted his star momentarily, at least, from the realm of movie low comedy to that of very serious drama.

He could have pictured Fatty trying to register joy, trying sadly to be jubilant with his lawyers, who, after a day of strategic victories, saw holly in them and talked of getting him from the trenches by Christmas.

Fatty was overwhelmed at the last by concerns that a mere lawyer who acts only occasionally for a living knows nothing about, and the movie world—camera men, magnates, directors and stars—is not here.

It walks coldly with an averted face upon the other side and, moreover, it took the worst possible time to serve upon its prodigal son a notice that would have made a stronger man quail. It has not changed. It is the same wind in which you have to fall from mountain-tops in hideously dangerous torrents and romp in the very van of carterous beasts for the sake of art.

It has informed Fatty—informed him coldly from afar—that he must emerge a hero from the court where he is charged with causing the death of Virginia Rappe, or be known no more in the films controlled by such powers as Zukor and Lasky.

Must Emerge as Martyr

An acquittal alone will not do. A jury disagreement will, it seems, be fatal. Fatty must appear to have been previously wronged by the State's accusation and, pending that outcome, he need not write or call in the places where he was once a king of sorts, and the cameras will be for others.

So there will be no picture of Mr. Arbuckle as he stood in the midst of his friends after a session of the court that made his lawyers purr with pleasure. In a ruling issued in the closing minutes of the session, the court broadly implied that the State had failed to demonstrate the essential fact on which the whole case of the prosecution rests, a fact which Mr. Brady, the District Attorney, believed he had proved to the satisfaction of everybody.

The State has sought persistently to convince the court and the jury that Virginia Rappe would still be alive if external violence of some sort had not been inflicted on her when she was alone in a room with Arbuckle at the St. Francis Hotel on Labor Day.

The District Attorney and his two assistants have fought brilliantly and with an energy that belies rumors which imply that political influence is not wholly absent from Fatty's trial. They revealed the line their argument will take in the long hypothetical question propounded by Dr. Van Collins, an expert for the defense, who has been mercilessly harassed and forced to several contradictory statements by his cross-examiners.

Physicians Quizzed

Dr. Collins, a member of the staff of the French Hospital here, was called to prove that the rupture of a vital organ which caused the death of Miss Rappe might have been spontaneous, and due to the effects of alcohol. The District Attorney favored him to admit that this was highly improbable.

MRS. ROSCOE ARBUCKLE. Fatty's wife, formerly known on the stage as Minta Durfee, became reconciled to her husband as the result of the charges brought against him after the death of Virginia Rappe. With others of the comedian's relatives, she shared his rather gloomy holiday today.

Mr. Haley has been sent to San Francisco to transmit accurate and colorful reports of the trial of Roscoe C. Arbuckle each day. He will continue to do so until the trial is finished.

church. Judge Loubserb sustained the objection with the remark that the State was asking the court and the jury to base conclusions on a presumption not sustained by the evidence. At that point the lawyers for the defense felt that their man was as good as acquitted.

They may be right and they may be wrong. In the corridors after adjournment they slapped Fatty on the shoulder. Freddie Fishback, Freddie who summoned Virginia to the Arbuckle suite, slapped Fatty three times and told him that his troubles would be all over in a week at the most.

McNab Benevolent

The great McNab, an ambassadorial person with a noble voice and exacting manners, even when he is bedeviling witnesses, told Fatty to run off with his folks, now, and eat his Thanksgiving dinner in peace. You might have supposed that a verdict of acquittal had actually been rendered.

It may have been the word that arrived yesterday by indirectness through the lawyers, who maintain communications between the unhappy comedian and the past, and it may have been that the rise over one mountain of trouble revealed to Fatty only another greater in the immediate future that caused him to remain silent and utterly dejected.

A hero? Could even Fairbanks look a hero against this background? The Arbuckle kid had arrived for the holiday. There were Mrs. Arbuckle and Fatty's sisters and two very little and slim, white-limbed, and very small velvet bonnets—nice people of the sort you could meet in the prosperous section of any tiny Middle-Western town.

The nuts had sat through the day timidly to witness and suffer at each onslaught of the District Attorney, and the heavens fell that though the Arbuckle kid was not a hero, he was at least a man or an ungentlemanly thing. They said over and over again all the things that little white-limbed ladies with velvet bonnets say and think about the boys they love.

PHILA. CHARITIES CAN'T GET MONEY VOTED BY STATE

Institutions Borrow of Banks at High Interest When Appropriations Are Not Paid

"TREASURY IS EXHAUSTED" IS THE EXCUSE GIVEN

Officers of institutions in and about Philadelphia which receive State aid gave ample confirmation today of the facts set forth in Col. George Nox McCain's dispatch to the EVENING PUBLIC LEDGER from Harrisburg yesterday, to the effect that the State Treasury had failed to supply appropriations made by the last General Assembly.

They said that they had no doubt similar conditions prevailed all over Pennsylvania. As a result of this situation these institutions in many instances are hampered in their functions, are obliged to keep those they owe money waiting, and in other cases are forced to borrow funds to carry on until the State aid is forthcoming.

It was observed in this connection that the banking interests are enabled, by reason of the state of affairs, to make money both ways. First, they are able to lend State funds on deposit, for which they pay the Commonwealth only 2 1/2 per cent at the rate of 6 per cent or more. Then the banks make another income when they lend money to institutions whose State aid has been withheld.

Can't Get Its Money

A typical instance of the general condition which exists in most of the Pennsylvania institutions for the Deaf and Dumb at Mount Airy. The appropriation made by the last session was $404,000. As yet the institution has received only $100,000.

Hospital Is Handicapped

Hahnemann Hospital, according to the assistant superintendent, is considerably handicapped in paying its bills by reason of the delay in receiving the appropriation for the current year.

LOVE FOR MOTHER WINS BOY FREEDOM

Wayne Parker, Luray Street, Trailed Father and Divorcee to Protect Home, He Says

Was ACCUSED OF INSULT

Because his actions were prompted, in Magistrate Price's opinion, by a desire to protect his mother and keep her home intact, Wayne Parker, eighteen, of 118 West Luray street, was cleared today of the charge of annoying, following and insulting Mrs. Henrietta Frise, twenty-eight years old, 4124 North Eighth street.

Magistrate Price was arrested last night by Patrolman Sinclair, of the Germantown and Lycoming avenues station, on complaint of Mrs. Frise, who uses her mother's name. When Parker was taken before Magistrate Price, this morning, at the Twenty-second street and Hunting Park avenue station, he said that he had followed Mrs. Frise, but that he had never annoyed her and insulted her.

Magistrate Price, when asked why he followed her, said: "Because I wanted to see what my father was doing. He spends all his time with her and is breaking up my mother's home."

While young Parker was testifying, Mrs. Elizabeth Frise, the mother of the woman in the case, became so noisy in contradicting his statements and belittling in her attitude toward other witnesses, including Mrs. George Parker, mother of the boy, that Magistrate Price adjourned the case until a patrolman and had her ejected.

According to Wayne Parker's story, his father, George W. Parker, a manufacturer, had no money for the past few months and had been spending much time away from home, and the boy said he had reason to believe that his father was being swayed by Mrs. Frise. He said he was watching her to see if he could not catch his father.

Magistrate Price, when asked if he was right in the question of following Mrs. Frise, said he had followed her to see if he could not catch his father.

BRITISH IN CLASH WITH CHINESE ON ROOT PRINCIPLES

FRENCH RAISE CANTON ISSUE AT CONFERENCE

Millerand Approves New French Army Bill

By the Associated Press

Washington, Nov. 24.—Although formal proceedings of the Arms Conference had been suspended for Thanksgiving Day, it was expected to be one of only nominal rest for the delegates, and that in the absence of any meetings of the Conference or its subcommittees the negotiations would continue to be pressed through consultations among the various individuals and groups.

As developments in the Conference stood today the outstanding point of interest appeared to be the conflict of views between the Chinese and French delegations in their interpretation of the four adopted Root principles as applying to the question of fiscal autonomy.

The British view, as authoritatively stated following the committee meeting of the nine delegations yesterday, that the Root resolutions were adopted by the Powers as according with acceptance by China of a financial consortium, pooling of railroad concessions, and continuing supervision of China's customs, would mean, in the opinion of the Chinese delegation, an internationalization of that country's economic resources. They declared that they were determined to bring forth no expression by the delegates of the British view.

The Chinese delegation proposed an amendment to the Root resolutions which would restore to their Government by three stages, the first permitting an immediate increase in the maximum to which China's import duties are now restricted.

The French delegation in connection with this proposal raised another element of uncertainty, the precedence of when the proposed Chinese delegates by what authority they presumed to speak for the Government of China over the Chinese Government.

Leadership of the French delegation fell today to Rene Viviani, with the departure for France of Premier Briand, who declared he was leaving "quite satisfied with the results of the conference, and with the case of France on the warm, friendly, co-operating declarations of the heads of the various delegations" at the opening session which had been the subject of opposing managerial reduction in the French army in the present position of that country.

French Premier Passes Through More Than 20,000 Spectators Present When Players Trot Out for Annual Fuss

Thousands of throats raised tributes to the Penn and Cornell football teams as they trotted on the gridiron of Franklin Field this afternoon for the twenty-eighth renewal of the classic struggle between the two institutions.

When the players dashed out on the field promptly at two o'clock, there were more than 20,000 spectators in the stands. Hundreds still were being turned through the gates and it was apparent that the inclement weather was not going to hold the crowd down much below the capacity of 32,000.

The spectators were disappointed at the weather, but not half as disappointed as the Red and Blue football teams. The Quakers realize that their forward pass attack which has been carefully planned will be more difficult to execute on a wet field and with a slippery ball. It was figured that conditions favored the Blue team.

PROFESSOR KOENIG NABBED IN LIQUOR SEIZURE AT HOME

Rabbi Claims French Wines, but "Dry" Agent Says Permits Are Irregular

PENN INSTRUCTOR AND 4 OTHERS ARE HELD IN BAIL

DR. AUGUSTUS KOENIG

Dr. Augustus Koenig, instructor at the University of Pennsylvania, was arrested early today with four truckmen who were unloading cases of French wines on Waverly street below Broad, at the rear of the doctor's home, 1324 Pine street.

Later Dr. Koenig was held in $2000 bail by Magistrate O'Brien, at the Twelfth and Pine streets station, for a further hearing tomorrow. He was released after some hours spent in a cell.

The magistrate fixed the bail of the other men at $1000. They are William Turner, Seventy-second street, New York; Ernest Enler, Bergen street, Brooklyn; Ernest Galt, 813 South Fifty-second street, this city, and William Wendstrom, 1819 Fairmount avenue, this city.

The permits are forgeries, the agent said, and that the truckmen were released on cash bail, putting up $1000 in bills of large denomination, peddled from a huge roll apparently furnished him by a "mysterious man," who came to see him in his cell.

Rabbi Says Permits Are His

The truckmen exhibited permits to withdraw 3050 gallons of wine for sacramental purposes from a New York warehouse. Rabbi Ben Zion Hoffman, of 1822 E. Fifth street, 813 South Fifty-second street, this city, and William Wendstrom, 1819 Fairmount avenue, this city.

Permits at Least Irregular

"If the names of Prohibition Director McComb and Associate Prohibition Director Butler on the permits are not forged," said Mr. Abel, "at least the forms are not properly made out. The law requires that they contain certain information which is not filled in on the lower left-hand corner by the shipper. This was left blank."

Besides this, the men on the truck exhibited a permit to take the wine to the rear of the doctor's home, which is required by law to move intoxicants, even where the other permit is in order.

Even if they had this permit, it would be illegal to take the wine to the rear of the doctor's home, as it is required by law to move intoxicants, even where the other permit is in order.

Patrolmen Follow Trucks

The arrests were due to the vigilance of Patrolman Jack Bell and Charles Friel, of the Twelfth and Pine street station. Bell was standing at Twelfth and Lombard streets at 3:20 o'clock this morning, when he saw a big truck with a trailer, carrying a load of wine, turning out Lombard street, and again turning out Thirtieth street.

A gate was open on Waverly street, which proved to be the gate of Dr.
