"BIG FIVE" NAVAL EXPERTS HALTED

One Delegation Asks Delay. U. S. and Japan Differ Concerning Ratio

AGREEMENT IS EXPECTED

By the Associated Press

Washington, Nov. 29.—The meeting today of the "Big Five" naval experts, the first general conference of the naval men scheduled for nearly a week, was postponed until tomorrow at the request of one of the delegations. No official statement as to the reason for the postponement or the delegation making the request was given.

The delay may be significant in view of the fact that Vice Admiral Kato has definitely announced that Japan want a 70 per cent naval ratio, while the American experts still give every indication of firm adherence to the view that 60 per cent for Japan is the maximum naval strength that could be accepted in view of the American liabilities and interests in the Pacific.

Standing on the dividing line in a favorable position for the forming of a cool judgment as to the ultimate outcome of the differences between the American and Japanese naval experts, some of the delegates of the other Powers have reached the conclusion that nothing has really occurred that is likely to prevent a satisfactory solution of the problem.

Expect Mutual Concessions

The delegates base their belief on the conviction that the spirit that has animated all the delegates has been so admirable as to insure mutual concession and the solution of the issues in a reasonable way.

The declaration of Vice Admiral Kato for a 70-per cent ratio for the Japanese fleet was the first authoritative announcement that Japan seeks to replace the "5-5-3" basis of the American naval limitation proposal. Kato said that the ratio he named is the minimum necessary for Japan's security.

The French and Italian Arms Conference delegations have had occasion to talk with each other on the subject of the relative naval strength of their respective countries. The French position is that France has no objection whatever to Italy having the same size navy as France which, it is contended, should eventually be 500,000 tons of capital ships and 75,000 tons of submarines.

Both France and Italy are very anxious that the question concerning their naval armaments should come before the Conference together with the settlement of the naval strengths of the three larger powers.

Compare French and Italian Fleets

Italy's principal interest is that no nation should have an absolute control of the Mediterranean, as otherwise she would be suffocated in her own sea. That is why Italy insists that her navy must be at least equal to that of any other Mediterranean country. At present the navy competing with Italy in the Mediterranean is that of France.

Italian official papers give the strength of the two fleets as follows: Dreadnoughts—Italy, six; France, seven. Pre-dreadnoughts—Italy, four; France, four. Armored cruisers—Italy, five, of which two are obsolete; France, ten, the greater part obsolete. Other cruisers—Italy, ten; France, five. Flotilla leaders—Italy, eight, of which three are under construction; France, one. Submarines—Italy, forty-three, of which ten are under construction; France, fifty-one.

Both Italy and France lost a considerable number of their auxiliary ships during the war, but their losses were replaced with the part of the fleet surrendered by Germany. Italy and France each received 10 per cent.

Shantung Issue Looms

In addition to a final agreement looked for today to gradually abolish the system of extra-territorial rights in China under which foreign Governments have set up their own courts there, the Far Eastern Committee of the Conference also was prepared to take up China's request for withdrawal of foreign troops stationed on her soil without treaty sanction.

Discussion of the latter question may bring up for the first time the Shantung and Manchurian controversies, in view of China's contention that Japanese troops are stationed there without authority. The real issue involved in these two problems, however, was expected to be deferred for discussion in the near future under the specific subject of railway leases.

HARDING PROPOSAL PLEASES LONDON

London, Nov. 29.—(By A. P.)—Increasing attention is given by the London press to President Harding's suggestion of an "association of nations" through a series of international conferences, the conclusions of which would be observed under a "gentlemen's agreement" rather than by treaty.

The Times in its editorial columns today says that Mr. Harding's conception of the principles underlying such an association has in itself a "tonic effect." The newspaper adds:

"It is heartening to know that the President, inspired by the results of the Washington Conference, is already looking forward to a future from which the possibility of active co-operation by America in the solution of acute international problems is not excluded."

The Morning Post says:

"The President's aspiration demands serious and respectful consideration. Any method whereby America can bring to bear her vast influence for the restoration of civilization is most welcome. As for the existing League of Nations, in default of the adhesion of America, it is impossible for it to fulfill the purpose of its existence."

Interest in and sympathy with "the growing movement in America for greater participation in world affairs" is expressed by the Daily News, which says that the refusal of the United States to enter the League of Nations was never regarded in England as proof of her intention to return permanently to the policy of isolation which the war temporarily made impossible.

WON'T RAISE DEBT ISSUE

British to Adhere Strictly to Arms Conference Agenda

Washington, Nov. 29.—(By A. P.)—The British Arms Conference delegation, through an authorized spokesman, today took occasion to state positively again that there was no intention on the part of the British Government of bringing up the subject of international indebtedness at the Conference.

It was said the Conference was adhering strictly to the agenda so far as could be observed, and the British delegates have no intention of asking the other delegates to extend the jurisdiction of the Conference. They believe that an extension of the agenda would diminish instead of increase the chances for complete success of the Conference.

NORRIS DEMANDS ALLIED DEBT PLAN

Federal Reserve Bank Governor Says U. S. Should Fix Policy at Once

EURROPE IS UPSET

"America, as soon as possible, should announce its policy regarding the immense debts owed it by the allied nations, George W. Norris, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia, today told members of the Bondsmen's Club in the Hotel Adelphia.

"Various European Governments are struggling with political and economic difficulties, compared to which our troubles are a summer holiday," Mr. Norris said.

"While our people will differ as to just what ought to be done, there will probably be a pretty general agreement that we ought not to press, harass or embarrass such of our late Allies as are our present debtors, but what they need to know, for the balancing of their governmental budgets and for the making of their general financial plans is what we are willing to do about it, and we ought to give them a statement on this subject as early a date as possible."

Mr. Norris urged the importance of the most careful study of the financial situation by all the financial interests of the country. America's exports, which reached $925,000,000 in June of 1920, dropped to $350,000,000 in June, 1921, and to $310,000,000 in June of this year.

"A large volume of exports," he said, "is an essential requisite of real and substantial prosperity in this country, not only for our industries but for our great agricultural population. We cannot have this large volume of exports, unless the people of the world can ship us goods in return, and can afford to settle the large balance of trade in our favor, which will always exist, no matter how great our imports may be.

"These conditions compel us to be interested in our tariff policy, in the stabilization of political and industrial conditions in Europe, in the adjustment of the indebtedness of European governments to the Government of the United States, and to the restoration of something like normalcy in exchange rates. European stocks of gold have been depleted almost to the point of an irreducible minimum. Practically speaking, there is no gold left in Europe, except, one, the metallic reserve of the great banks of issue; two, hoarded gold, little more of which can be dragged from its hiding places; and, three, an unknown amount of Russian gold, some of which may yet find its way to this country.

"It is therefore manifest that it is going to be difficult for Europe to settle ordinary trade balances with us, even with the help of continuing American investments in foreign securities. For them to not only settle in gold these trade balances, but also pay us anything like ten billions of governmental indebtedness, is utterly out of the question. It is beyond the bounds of possibility, and should not for a moment be considered by any intelligent man. It is capable of mathematical demonstration that there is nothing like enough gold in the world to do it. It is a serious question whether they can be allowed or encouraged to export to us a sufficient amount of goods to balance their imports from us, without serious results to our American industries. For them to export sufficient amounts of goods to not only balance their imports but to discharge their governmental obligations, would spell ruin to most of our industries.

"What, then, ought we do about these foreign debts? I can ask that question, but I am not prepared to answer it. Congress has passed a bill creating a commission of five, authorizing that commission, subject to the approval of the President, to refund or convert and to extend obligations of any foreign government, and receive bonds and obligations of any foreign Government in substitution for the bonds and obligations of such foreign Governments now held. It is expressly provided, however, that this Act shall not be construed to authorize the exchange of bonds or obligations of any foreign Government for those of any other foreign Government, or the cancellation of any part of such indebtedness except through payment. I think that it is regrettable that the negotiations on this subject should have been put in the hands of a commission, instead of being intrusted to the Secretary of the Treasury, and it is still more regrettable that the commission's hands should have been tied by a restriction such as this.

"We should remember that all these foreign obligations represent money loaned after we went into the war, and most of it when the supplying of food and munitions was all that we were prepared to do; that none of this money went out of the country, but was all paid out for supplies bought here; that the transaction amounted to our Government paying our citizens for supplies furnished to our Allies, those Allies agreeing to repay these advances to our Government at some date in the future. If those countries had said at that time 'we must have these things, and we have no money to pay for them, but if you will furnish them to us we will keep on fighting until you are ready to come in,' would we not willingly have made ourselves parties to that arrangement? The indebtedness, therefore, stands on a very different plane from an ordinary loan to a debtor who has contracted the loan for his own exclusive benefit, and in the course of an ordinary commercial transaction. In the case of Great Britain, there is an additional equity which should not be overlooked. A part of Great Britain's indebtedness to us practically represents supplies which they bought here for the benefit of France and Italy, and while Great Britain owes us approximately four and a quarter billions, France and Italy owe her approximately four and a half billions. These are facts which should be kept in mind in any possible or suggested settlement."

HISTORICAL PAPERS SOLD

Documents Dating Back to 1846-47 Go Under Auctioneer's Hammer

New York, Nov. 29.—By A. P.)—Documents bearing on the dramatic events of 1846-47, which had their sequel in California coming under the American flag, were sold here yesterday under the hammer of the auctioneer.

The collection, containing original manuscripts papers of old Fort Sutter and records written at Sonora, Yerba Buena, Monterey and elsewhere, had been lost for more than fifty years, and were sold for $8850. The secret of their hiding place was not revealed, and nothing was said as to the way they were discovered. When last heard from they were a part of the impedimenta of John C. Fremont's disastrous campaign in New Mexico in 1848.

Among the papers contained in the thirty-nine volumes sold was the original proclamation by Commodore John D. Sloat of the annexation of California by the United States, written aboard the Savannah, his flagship, and dated July 7, 1846.

Economic Conference of Nations Foreseen

ence, the Harding Administration has the authority that the War Debt Funding bill would confer upon it. And that has not passed. Irreconcilable opposition to it has not been lessened by Mr. Harding's confidence of recent date nor by the belief quite generally held that this Conference is but the opener for the real conference at which the job of getting the world back to work, so that it can produce goods and buy our goods, will be seriously undertaken.

Next Move Is Ours

This Conference has started this country upon the road of international co-operation. The other countries of the world have co-operated with us here to an unexampled degree. Turn about is fair play. The next move in co-operation is ours.

The isolationists know this. They must stop what is now started before the realities of the world's economic distress are faced, or their cause is lost.

Some conference will certainly follow this. It may not turn out to be broad enough in scope to be genuinely economic. It may not deal boldly with the immense load of uncollectible foreign debts and their relation to German reparations and to the depreciated paper of Europe.

It may, though described largely as economic, be really financial, as the present Conference is loosely spoken of as a Disarmament Conference, when it is really one on the limitation of naval armaments.

It will busy itself with furnishing a stable international medium of exchange and shirk the more formidable task of setting the world upon its feet, implying all that does about Germany and France and Russia and our enormously guarded pile of nearly worthless foreign paper.

After Mr. Wilson's defeat at Paris, international conferees are cautious. Mr. Hughes in this gathering has not attempted more than he could easily do. The next conference may follow his example. But some such conference is implicit in the success of this one.

VANDERLIP WOULD AID REHABILITATE EUROPE

New York, Nov. 29.—Recognition of the Allies of their eleven-billion-dollar debt to America as a just debt, agreement by this country to ease payments and the money thus repaid to be used in rehabilitating Europe, was proposed tonight by Frank A. Vanderlip, New York banker, as means of settling the obligations of the war.

The United States would be more than much by the rapid receipt of payment in the form of goods, the only possible form of payment in view of the demoralization of foreign exchange, he said, to the debtors would be furnished in making the payment.

"I would have America make a great gesture in international relationships," he said. "While demanding payment, for example, I would have America say that she is prepared for the present to defer the receipt of it.

"I would like to see every dollar we can ever be paid ready to be used for years to come devoted to the rehabilitation of European civilization. It is only through such rehabilitation that the debts can ever conceivably be paid. It is only through the rehabilitation of European civilization that American can ever conceivably realize in full measure her destiny or can expect a full measure of prosperity for her people.

"If we insist to the letter upon our claim, our claim will in all probability never be met. If we insist upon it unselfishly, we will realize in hundredfold not in cash. If we are generous and wisely generous, those claims will all be paid, and I believe will all be paid, and the good we do with them will mean more to us materially than anything we would conceivably be parting with."

SPANISH WON'T HALT TILL MOORS ARE VANQUISHED

Military and Political Forces Plan Joint Campaign

Madrid, Nov. 29.—(By A. P.)—Spanish forces in Morocco will begin a general movement against the Moors, columns operating simultaneously from Melilla and Tetuan immediately upon the arrival from Spain of General Berenguer, high commissioner, according to the Diario Universal. General Berenguer left here Sunday evening to resume his duties after conferring with members of the Government.

The newspaper asserts that complete unanimity was reached between the Cabinet members and the high commissioner relative to the Moroccan campaign. Operations will continue until the entire zone is brought under a Spanish protectorate.

The military campaign will be accompanied by the political consolidation of the occupied area. It is expected that the operations will require six months for completion, two weeks being allotted for attainment of the first objectives. After the initial movement, if it is successful, two weeks respite is planned to coincide with the Christmas holidays for the benefit of the troops.

Vare Councilmen Drop Cleaning Row

broidered his remarks with an allusion to Grecian mythology, and at another time he speared the phrase "mon ost" right out of the Latin classics.

Drops Into Ancient Lore

In his reference to the glory that was Greece, Mr. Hall said something about "shearing of Greeks bearing gifts." Independents began to study that and thought they saw a great light. They began to wonder what all the sudden enthusiasm for city street cleaning meant. "What a case of Greeks bearing gifts!" they noted.

Independents felt that the answer lay in the demand of Caffrey and Hall that Director Caven give figures showing just what each branch of the Administration program would cost. Now the Director is preparing his budget, himped the items for employes engaged in street cleaning and the collection of ashes, rubbish and garbage in the total of $5,088,000. The Councils wants to know what each item will cost, how much for street cleaning, how much for the removal of ashes and so on.

The Director had a reason for lumping the items. He will be engaged in many separate activities. He wants to be able, for example, to use the money differently next year, so that when there is a slack season in one branch the men can be transferred to another branch. If a lump-sum line is sharply drawn through each branch, then a rigid adherence to the lines of the budget would require a separate set of men for each piece of work.

May Be Bit of Trickery

This, of course, will increase the cost. The Combine says that contract work is more expensive than city work, and they would like to have the city's share of the [illegible] than by contract. [illegible] will be [illegible] Director Caven has persisted in a system of accounting which will show precisely what each branch of the city service will cost. The Director made this announcement and then published the plan of the Combine by saying:

"We [illegible] how it is being put up and [illegible] work and make the streets clean."

Independents, he explained, the people must look to the contractors will be used for the benefit of the taxpayers by the simple of cleaning more streets, cleaning them more frequently, and cleaning them better than they are now [illegible].

The Combine is now awaiting figures from Director Caven to show what each branch of the city program will cost. [illegible] no effort will be made to [illegible] the budget [illegible] Combine is prepared to reach [illegible].

May Increase Total Cost

"The [illegible] is the result of increasing the appropriation for the city program over the total now asked for. At any rate, independents having had their eyesight brushed up by Charley Hall are afraid of the gifts of the Combine and fear they will [illegible] to urge the Combine Councilmen not to be so liberal with their money for street cleaning.

"There is such a thing," say the independents, "as being so liberal that we will be made to look like spendthrifts."

This spirit, on the part of the Combine, was reflected in Hall's jovial suggestion to President Weglein that he write out a check for $5,000,000 and hand it to Director Caven for use in making a success of street cleaning by municipal forces.

Probe Monroe Murder Mystery

Dowagiac, Mich., Nov. 29.—(By A. P.)—O. L. Smith, Deputy State Attorney General, joined the State Police and local officials today in their attempt to solve the mystery of the slaying, September 17, of three members of the family of William Monroe.

DR. LORENZ FAINTS FROM OVERWORK

Famous Surgeon Is Overcome After Conducting Three Operations

SEEKS MEDICAL RELIEF

New York, Nov. 29.—Fatigued after performing three bloodless operations, Dr. Adolf Lorenz yesterday examined forty of the more than 200 waiting crippled children at the Hospital for Joint Diseases. Then he collapsed.

In entering the little room to see the next patient, the gray-haired surgeon from Austria, who is operating free of charge out of gratitude to the United States for American relief measures in his native land, reeled and fell into the arms of his surgical assistant, Dr. Walter I. Galland. After a rest of half an hour it was announced the great healer himself must seek medical aid.

Dr. Lorenz was taken in an automobile to the offices of Dr. Jacob Kaufman, where his stomach ailment was relieved. Upon strict promise that he would conserve his energy, Dr. Lorenz was then permitted to continue his schedule for the day. He curtailed the clinic at Broad Street Hospital, but appeared there, where hundreds were waiting.

Dr. Lorenz will not operate today, but will examine patients in the morning in the Hospital for Joint Diseases, and in the afternoon he will examine sixty children in Kings County Hospital, who have been selected by the City Health Department.

3 PHILA. HOSPITALS INVITE DR. LORENZ

Three hospitals in Philadelphia have broken through the crust of the opposition of the medical profession and will invite Dr. Adolf Lorenz, famous Austrian exponent of bloodless surgery, to this city to conduct clinics for crippled children.

Dr. Garry C. Hudson, a member of the staff of the Samaritan Hospital, of Temple University, will journey to New York tomorrow to visit Dr. Lorenz and ask him to come to this city. An impromptu meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Temple University, called together yesterday by Dr. Russell H. Conwell, decided upon that course.

Simultaneous with the action of Temple University yesterday, the Board of Directors of the Osteopathic Hospital of Philadelphia decided unanimously to ask Dr. Lorenz to come to the hospital at Nineteenth and Spring Garden streets and to conduct a clinic. The invitation went by wire.

It is Dr. Conwell's plan to open clinics in the Samaritan and Garretson Hospitals and to have Dr. Lorenz present scientific demonstrations of his surgery in the amphitheatre of the medical school of the Temple University, should he consent to come here.

BISPHAM WILL FILED

His Widow and Two Daughters Are Well Provided For

New York, Nov. 29.—One-fourth of the estate of David Bispham, eminent American baritone, who died early last month, and all his books, music, manuscripts and objects of art, are bequeathed to Mrs. Henrietta Muller Ten Eyck, of 50 Central Park West, by the terms of his will, which was filed yesterday in the Surrogate's office. The will disposes of an estate of more than $100,000.

The will provides for Bispham's widow and two daughters, before mentioning Mrs. Ten Eyck. They inherit three-quarters of the singer's property.

Mrs. Bispham and one of her daughters, Mrs. Lena A. Carnegie Bispham, live at the Rosemary Inn at Stamford, Conn. The other daughter, the Countess Vida Daldi-Borghieri, lives in Florence, Italy.

The estate consists mainly of property bequeathed in trust to Mr. Bispham with power of disposition by will of his grandfather, David Scull, of Philadelphia.

It was stated that the bequest to Mrs. Ten Eyck, who with her husband, has been a friend of the singer for more than twenty-five years, has no significance beyond the fact that it was [illegible] to enable her to carry out certain arrangements which Mr. Bispham had in mind for several years before he died. The will specifically asks that she apply some part of her legacy to the erection of a monument to him.

Bricks and Architects.

BRICKS are like birds, or boys,—there's such an interesting variety in them!

Every kiln of bricks burned turns out at least four different kinds, affording an endless variety of possible effects in building. A real architect, who knows how to use common brick, puts each kind in its right place, with effective trimmings and "pointing." Thus he gives you a house of the greatest beauty and style, as well as permanent and growing value, at cost far below that of any other fireproof material.

To get high value at low cost, choose an architect who knows how to use common brick.

When you want any information about bricks, their kinds, colors, qualities, styles, uses or prices, the products of different makers, how to word specifications, names of competent architects, builders, engineers, etc., call up either of our offices.

AUTOIST IS HELD IN CHILD'S DEATH

Coroner in Doubt as to Owner of Car That Caused Fatal Accident

LICENSE TAG IN QUESTION

Convinced that Pincus Kallier, 2144 North Thirty-second street, is the man who drove his automobile into two small girls, killing one and injuring the other, and then drove off without stopping, Coroner Knight held him without bail today for action by the Grand Jury.

The accident occurred on the Sixty-third street near Woodland avenue, November 14. Edna Mann, who lived at 2230 South Sixty-third street, was killed. Six-year-old Catherine Meehan, of 2030 South Sixty-third street, was injured and is still in the Misercordia Hospital.

Witnesses testified the automobile was going at an illegal rate of speed, which was increased after the children were knocked down. Some one noted the license number, 70396, which was listed in police records as belonging to Max Solomon, of 519 Buttonwood street. Solomon was arrested. When he protested that on June 17 he had sold his car to Kallier, tags and all, Kallier also was arrested.

Kallier admitted the purchase of the automobile, but declared that he had used license tags issued to himself.

Coroner Knight, after declaring that the case was "the most dastardly in all his experience," said that one man or the other was lying under oath. After repeated questioning had failed to change either stories, he announced that he could do nothing but hold both Solomon and Kallier without bail. This was done and an oder took the men into custody.

As the Coroner was leaving the inquest room Ralph Graham, his chauffeur, who accompanied him, caught a fragment of conversation between two witnesses who were also leaving the room. He repeated what he had heard to Coroner Knight, who at once spoke to these witnesses.

The result was that the Coroner ordered the case reopened. The witnesses, Charles Brown, 2110 South Sixty-fifth street, and Raymond Seville, 6213 Grays avenue, testified that they were all but certain that Kallier was the driver of the car that killed the girl. There was another man and two women in the car also, they said.

The Coroner then ordered that Kallier be held without bail, and that bail for Solomon as a material witness be fixed at $2500.
