"The Four Nuts"
By DADDY

(Jack, Janet and Dame Instinct, seeking a summer bird who is singing spring songs in the autumn woods, come upon Hacked Chipmuck, who vanishes into his hole and will not come out. Dame Instinct asks Jack and Janet if they want to go underground with her, and they quickly say "yes.")

CHAPTER III

Four Nuts in a Pouch
JACK and Janet were eager to go with Dame Instinct hunting after Hacked Chipmuck in his hiding place underground. But how were they to get down through Hacked Chipmuck's tunnel, which was as small as the inside of a lawn hose?

"Way, I can't even get my arm into that hole," said Jack.
"No, and you hadn't better put your arm into it, or you might get your fingers nipped," chuckled Dame Instinct. "Hacked Chipmuck has sharp teeth and he is quick to use them."

"Then how are we going to get underground?" asked Janet.
"Why, by magic, of course," answered Dame Instinct. "You forget that I am a fairy godmother. All fairy godmothers have a few magic tricks up their sleeves. Just look at this one."

The basket which Dame Instinct had used as a wheelless auto was resting on the ground nearby. Dame Instinct began to wave her hands back and forth over it, at the same time saying a queer jumble of words:

"Hickory nut, walnut, hazel nut, peanut, chestnut, beechnut, big nut, little nut, presto! Change! Here's a new nut."

As Dame Instinct said these words the basket grew smaller and seemed to close up, and as Dame Instinct finished, there, indeed, lay a new nut. The basket had been changed into this nut before their very eyes.

The nut was small and three-cornered, looking exactly like a beech-nut.

While Jack and Janet were marveling at this magic, Dame Instinct turned to Jack and began to wave her hands over him, murmuring the same words she had said over the basket.

And Jack grew smaller as the basket had, and when she finished he wasn't Jack any more. He was just a nut lying on the ground.

And the same thing happened to Janet. Dame Instinct said the magic words over her and Janet turned into a nut.

But Dame Instinct didn't stop there. She waved her hands over her own head saying the words, and she, too, became a nut.

Now when Jack and Janet became nuts, they found they were not lifeless as nuts usually are. They could see and hear what was going on just as though they were in boy and girl form instead of in nut form.

The place was very quiet for some time, and then Jack and Janet heard a faint scratching. Soon they saw a pair of beady eyes peering from Hacked Chipmuck's hole, and after the eyes looked all around, Hacked Chipmuck himself popped out. He thought the folks who had knocked at his door were gone and there was no one about.

Hacked Chipmuck got busy at once. He was looking for food to put in his winter storehouse, and he knew he didn't have any time to waste.

"Chip! Chip! Chip! I must find more nuts! I must find more nuts!" chirped Hacked Chipmuck, scratching about among the leaves.

And in his scratching he came upon the wheelless auto, Jack, Janet and Dame Instinct's hole, all turned into nuts by Dame Instinct's magic.

"Ho! Ho! Ho! Here are four fine nuts," chirped Hacked Chipmuck. Jack and Janet felt their hearts sink. Dame Instinct had gotten them into a fine fix. Hacked Chipmuck would eat them and that would be the last of them.

Hacked Chipmuck grabbed the wheelless auto, nibbled a sharp edge of the shell, and stuffed the nut into a pouch beside his mouth. And while Jack and Janet were still shivering, Hacked Chipmuck grabbed them, nibbled the sharp edges off their shells and stuffed them into his pouches. Dame Instinct he grabbed in his mouth, and then with his mouth and pouches all swollen out, he dived into his hole.

(Queer things happen down in Hacked Chipmuck's hole as will be told tomorrow.)

Choice Cuts —and Others

A few months ago a newspaper man visited one of the wholesale markets of Swift & Company. He wanted to see a retailer buy a short loin of beef and then watch the retailer sell the porterhouse and sirloin steaks from it over his counter. He thought this would make a good story.

The head of the market took the reporter into the "cooler" where he showed him a high class side of beef. With a wooden skewer he marked off the short loin and said, "That is only 8 per cent of the weight of the whole side and it is selling for four times as much as this piece (and he marked off the "chuck," which is about one-fourth of the side of beef.)"

The wide variation in the wholesale price of various cuts from the same side of beef is caused largely by demand for the so-called choicer cuts. The others are, of course, just as wholesome.

It seems as though more people than ever are demanding choicer cuts, and their demand sets the price. If few people ask for the fore-quarter cuts, the price of forequarters will automatically drop to a figure low enough to induce people to buy because of cheapness.

Even though certain cuts sell for relatively high prices, other cuts, due to lack of demand, sell so low that our profit from all sources over a period of five years averaged only a fraction of a cent a pound.

It is competition between consumers for the choicer cuts that keeps prices for those cuts relatively high; an equalizing demand for all parts of the carcass would benefit producer, packer, retailer and consumer.

Our average wholesale selling price of all products has fallen about 40 per cent since September 1920.
