BOXING among the colleges is here to stay." George Decker, coach of the University of Pennsylvania boxing team, himself a star lightweight a decade ago, made the above assertion this morning in the boxing room of the University.

"When I first came to the University back in 1909 to start boxing there

I have seen the sport grow from a enthusiasts until this season we heve 150 men trying out for the team and quite a number more who are taking up the sport to become proficient in the art of self-defense.

CTHERE is hardly a sport on the l curriculum that compares with boxing as a body builder. It forces a man to think fast to save himself in an emergency, teaches him to use his muscles to advantage, thereby buildmuscles to advantage, thereby butta-ing up his body, gives him moral courage and does lots of other things that are necessary if the average undergraduate is to have a sound body as well as a sound mind.

then ever before and contains twenty or thirty men who really have lots of ability with the gloves. From that number I expect to select a team that will do credit to the University."

The other players are from the Pacific Coart Baseball League. Owners of the Winter League clubs are identified with the Coart League teams. At the opening of the season they took out inurance against rain and

As yet the captain for this year has not been chosen, but it is expected that Johnny Lukas, the Shamokin lad, who played a backfield post on the varsity football team during the last season, will get the position.

Lukas jumped into the breach last rear when Decker lost his 158-pound boxer, and surprised the intercollegiate world by his great boxing. This year, according to Decker, Lukas is a better boxer than he was last year and should go through the senson unde eated. the 115-pound class Decker has two years ago and who hails from Altonia, and Benson, of Arkansas, have had lots of experience, and should be able to uphold the prestige of their class against the best boxers in the colleges.

MAT DOUGHERTY, the son of of Lieperville," is the star of the 125-pound class. This is Dougherty's first year out for the team, but he shows the experience of a veteran. He has frequently boxed with Johnny Kilbane, the boss of the feather-weight division, and has learned much from the gray thatched warrior.

Francis Sullivan, a member of the freshman football team during the last season; Welsh, of Boston, and Os-trecker, who won his bout in the M. I. T. meet last year with a knockout, are other members of the 125-pound class showing form.

Southern High Represented

In the 135-pound class, Bernstein, formerly of Southern High School, and Millner, of Williamsport, have the call on the other dozen or more candidates. When O'Malley returns in February this division will be greatly strength-

Johnny Breslin, of Shenandoah, is the leader in the 145-pound class. He is a veteran of the last two seasons and was in do very capable boxer. Harold Davis, Newark, and Robb, of Cleveland. the latter the end of the freshman foot-ball team during the last season, are making a great bid for the first post n this class.

Johnny Lukas, already mentioned; Kipg, the freshman football star, and Lovendale, the veteran of last year, are the best in the 158-pound class. Papworth, of the freshman gridiron team, and Hap Day, the center of the varsity eleven, are the mainstays in the 175-pound class. Day, inexperi-enced last fear, has shown such form that Decker regards him as one of the best mittmen in his big squad.

IN THE heavyweight class, Tommy Cowel, from last year; Kretz, also a veteran of last season; Wilson and Graf, the latter one of the guards on the gridiron eleven, are the best.

15000 Rounds at Penn

George Decker, coach of the University of Pennsylvania boxing team, has a unique record in the ring sport. Since 1909, when he started to coach at the Red and Blue institution, Decker, a former local lightweight, has exchanged punches with 5000 Penn students, three rounds each, for a total of 15,000 rounds.

This is said to be a record unequaled in boxing circles, particularly among the colleges. Decker expects a great team at the Univer-

class for four years; Tommy O'Malley and Dr. Arthur Light. Decker in his prime was one of the leading lightweights of this city. Dursity back in 1900 to start boxing there was a peculiar feeling among college men that the sport was rough and therefore improper for undergraduates. Champion Figures Driving | Former Penn Player Iron, Midiron, Mashie Iron, Mashie, Mashie Niblick. Niblick and Putter Ought to Be Enough Metal

By JESSE P. GUILFORD mateur Golf Champion of the United States N MY last article I mentioned that in approaching we have different clubs to take care of the various distances required. There are a great number of iron clubs, and I believe that a player makes a mistake in carrying too many irons with him. He should make a few do the work, and thus in using a few he becomes more familiar with them. If a man carries around ten or twelve irons the chances are that he is using none of them well, and hefore each stroke is made he debates with himself just which club he should

I would make this suggestion, however, and that is that there is no need for both clubs in one bag.

If the lie of my ball at this range does ot warrant the use of a driving iron, I employ a midiron.

The driving iron is of no use except when the ball is in a good lie, because it is not laid back sufficiently to dig out of a bad lie.
