

TWO FIREMEN RISK LIVES TO SAVE DOG

Father Carries Baby and Wife Along Ledge at Blaze, 813 North Third Street

CHILDREN LEAP TO SAFETY

Two firemen risked their lives to save a two-year-old French poodle during a fire at 2:30 o'clock this morning at the jewelry store and dwelling of Samuel Weinberg, 813 North Third street. Two children, Ida and Solomon, escaped in-Jury by jumping from a second-story window. The flames caused about $500 damage. Samuel Weinberg, who occupied a second-story front room, was awakened by smoke pouring in the hallway. He awakened his wife and three-year-old son Fred. While Mrs. Weinberg groped her way to a rear second-story room, where Ida and Solomon were sleeping, Weinberg climbed to a ledge outside the second story and crept cautiously to an adjoining house with the baby in his arms. He left the child in the arms of a neighbor and returned to save other members of the family. Meanwhile, Mrs. Weinberg had carried the other two children to a window. They became excited and jumped to the sidewalk, but neither was badly injured.

Weinberg then carried his wife, who was partially overcome, along the narrow window ledge to the adjoining building. When the family gathered a few moments later on the sidewalk the piteous howl of Whimsy, the French poodle, was heard. "Who will save Whimsy?" cried Ida.

"Oh, please save him; he will be burned to death." She clutched the coat sleeve of a big fireman of Engine Company No. 21. The plaintive appeal and the little girl's tears were too much for him. "Never mind," he said, "we'll get that dog and bring him out safely to you." Two of the fire-fighters then entered the store. Twice they were driven back by the dense smoke. They finally managed to reach the shed and there they found Whimsy, who didn't know what it was all about, frantically trying to nose open a rear door. He leaped into the arms of one of his rescuers and was carried to the street. Ida seized the poodle and covered him with kisses. Whimsy was singed a little—"but he was going to have his hair trimmed anyway," Ida said.
