3 HARVARD ATHLETES ON MAXWELL'S FIRST ALL-EASTERN ELEVEN

Macomber, Brown and Owen Represent Crimson on Star Team—Killinger, Aldrich and Kaw Other Backs Selected—Keck and R. Stein Tackles

By ROBERT W. MAXWELL
Sports Editor Evening Public Ledger

IN SELECTING an All-Eastern football team for 1921 we have discovered there are more stars in this section than any one suspected. Because the game has become standardized and the smaller colleges can turn out teams as good as in the larger institutions, the players on the minor eleven cannot be overlooked. In these days a player on the Swarth team has as much chance as a star from Yale.

Better football was played this year than ever before, despite the fact that Pitt suffered three reverses, Harvard two, Princeton three, Penn three and Yale one. The defeats did not mean the losers had weaker teams than in the past, but the opponents were stronger. Competition became keener, inter-sectional games were arranged with a lavish hand and followers of the sport had a most exciting season.

The showing of the Chicago team against Princeton, Centre against Harvard and Georgia Tech against Penn State proved that the game is just as far advanced outside the select Eastern circle, and the often-mentioned gridiron supremacy on the Eastern seaboard turned out to be purely mythical. In football these days it is every team for itself and only the fittest survive. It is the team on the field, not the college, that counts in the game and glory.

The All-Eastern team which we have selected is the result of close study of the men on the football field in the big games they played. We are not stepping out with an All-American selection, because it is difficult to award places to players who were never in action. Only the East and the South are covered, with the Western boundary at Pittsburgh.

The Ends

MACOMBER, of Harvard, looked like the best end of the year. He was a marvel on the defense, and in the Yale game no ground was gained around him. He followed every play closely and was a sure tackler. On punts he was down the field in good style and always was close to the punter with the ball. Macomber also was a good receiver of the forward pass and scored several touchdowns on that play when they were needed.

McCallum, of Penn State, is the other end. We watched him closely in the games against Lehigh, the Navy and Pittsburgh, and he did everything that was expected of him. He, too, is a good defensive man and a star on the offense. He is a good running mate for Macomber.

Bob Roberts, of Centre, did excellent work in the Harvard game and was a big factor in the victory scored by the Kentuckians. He is one of the best I have seen at smashing interference and getting the runner. His defensive play was exceptionally high class. Roberts, of Lafayette, did well in every game, and before he gets out of college should be the best wingman in the game.

Sturm, of Yale, played fast, and in the Harvard game seemed to be better than ever before. His great wingman was Stork, Army; Park, Navy; Ertowang, Penn State; Connelly, Swarthmore; Pennington, and Kopf, Washington and Jefferson.

The Tackles

KECK, of the Princeton tackle, gets first place at that position. Keck always played a hard game, was all over the field, tackling in the center of the line and at the ends, and on the attack opened wide holes for his backs to slide through. Keck always got all in the game, and played so hard occasionally he became a trifle rough. This, however, was not intentional. It was all in the game.

R. Stein, of Washington and Jefferson, is a finished tackle. He not only played his position up to the highest standards, but also gave signals from his place on the line. Little is known of his work in the Far East, but he is about as good as could be found this year. With Keck, the tackles would be well taken care of.

Lindsay Moore, captain and left tackle on Washington and Lee, is considered one of the best ends of the year. Charles Moran, of Centre, told me he played better than any tackle he had seen, and Charles Brickley also talked in with a big honor. Therefore, Moore gets a place on the second eleven.

Gulick, of Swarthmore, played well in every game. He was a steady but not a brilliant player, and a good man to have on the line. Other good tackles were King, Navy; Kane, Harvard; Williams, Lafayette; Intz, Yale; Hooper, Princeton; and McMillan, Penn State. Malton of State looked like a sure All-Eastern tackle early in the season, but suffered a broken leg in one of the earlier games.

The Guards

IN A football game, where it is a practice scrimmage or a championship contest, the most conspicuous players are the guards. They are in the middle of the line, working hard all of the time, opening holes for the men with the ball, breaking through on the defense, protecting forward passes, getting into the interference and tackling like men. The crowd seldom knows what men are playing those positions.

Unless a guard is an unusual player, he gets nothing but his name in the lineups.

Brown, of Harvard, is the best guard of 1921. I watched him closely in the Centre and Yale games, and he delivered the goods from which to whistle. Against Yale he broke through repeatedly and tackled the punner for a yard. He handled his man early on the defense. He was all that a guard should be.

Schwab, of Lafayette, is his running mate. This young man has been playing three years, never has been elected captain, but always has led the Maroon and White eleven. He outdid every opponent this year, always led the interference on end runs, was a stone wall on the defense and deserves special mention.

Dradler, of the Army, and Bane, of Penn State, get places on the second eleven. They performed well in every game. Other good guards were Garbisch, of the Army; Carnes and Frazee, of the Navy; Morgan and Baker, Princeton; Bold, Lafayette; Clark and Guernsey, Yale; and Peters, of Pitt.

The Center

HERB STEIN, of Pittsburgh, is the only real center of the year. In all of the games he was the bright shining star, both on the attack and defense, and his work always was good. A center these days has a lot to do. He must pass the ball to any one of the backs, block his opponent and then get into the interference. Stein did this very well. He also was Pitt's best defense against the stout forward pass, tackled on either end and was the best relay man we have seen since the days of Bob Peck.

Myerson, of Princeton, also played in a hard, consistent game. He gets second choice without question. Conroy, of Swarthmore, showed a great improvement since his work of last year and should be one of the leading candidates in 1922. The other good centers were Larson, Navy; Landis, Yale; Clark, Harvard; Green, Army; and Brown, of Lafayette.

The Quarterback

KILLINGER, of Penn State, stands alone for quarterback honors, not only because of his bold generalship, but also his running with the ball. The Penn State star was one of the best runners I have ever seen, and he was able to run with the ball like a runner with the ball most of the time, but not Killinger. He used his other backfield men, and when in real trouble he usually got by for a good gain. He used himself as a threat, which is hard to do.

Bull also was good, but he played in a different style of game. The little Harvard pilot never ran with the ball. He was a great field general, however, and seldom made a mistake.

Louise, of Princeton, was injured most of the time and never reached the form of last year. Other star performers were O'Hara, Yale; Geiges, Swarthmore; Wray, Penn; and Conroy, of the Navy.

The Halfbacks

MAC ALDRICH, of Yale, is the leading halfback. He was the principal ground-gainer on the attack and also a steady man on the defense. In every game he started, despite the fact he was the slowest man in the Yale backfield. Aldrich seemed to play better than he was, and he was able to run with the ball. He could almost anywhere it was necessary, and it was simply another case of a player using his true form in an emergency. Aldrich also was one of the finest captains we ever have seen, and is given the captaincy of the All-Eastern.

The Fullback

EN, of Harvard, was this job because of his stellar work all season. He is a wonderful line-cracker, gets into the interference, receives the pass and always can be depended upon to gain ground. He did not equal in the East this year.

For some reason or other little has been said of Kaw, of Cornell this year. He was the biggest scorer in the East, runs with the ball better than any I have seen, and is a very hard man to tackle. He never got more out of him than the others, because he always is good for a couple of yards after being tackled. Kaw was the best man on the Cornell team and deserves a place.

Other good backs were McMillan, of Centre, who was shifted from quarterback; Barchet, Navy; Gilroy and Garrity, Princeton; Lightner and Wilson, of Princeton; and J. J. Davis and Anderson, Pittsburgh; Fitz, Harvard; Erikson, Dartmouth; Yarnall, Swarthmore; and Brenner and Ma, Lafayette.
