

300 CRIPPLES WOULD TEST SKILL OF DR. LORENZ HERE

Samaritan Hospital Swamped by Pleas for Chance to Have "Bloodless Surgeon" End Children's Woes

"I'm going to get well, I'm going to get well," chants a little fellow of six years; "the Big Doctor will make my legs well."

Thomas Scarlett, of 1018 Lombard street, is another example of implicit faith in Dr. Adolf Lorenz, the "bloodless surgeon." Infantile paralysis has been his affliction, but he is now happy, because he expects to be cured when the great Viennese comes here to work his miracles.

Applications at the Samaritan Hospital for treatment by Dr. Lorenz are still flying in and Mrs. Laura Southwick, in charge of the telephone calls almost swamped with waiting room, and by people in her waiting room, the lame, the halt and the blind make long lines. One boy suffered a serious burn a year ago and has not lifted his arm since. His anxious mother was one day awaiting her turn to get an appointment. Yesterday was the first appointment and the dispensary was filled to overflowing. Wheel chairs, crutches and braces were in abundance, but the children whose spines were twisted like cork-screws seemed for the moment to forget their trouble, the hope of being cured by the noted surgeon being paramount.

From Maple Shade, N. J., came the mother of nine-year-old Mary Biltz-covitch. Since the day the child was old enough, she has never ventured a foot on the floor, because her frail little legs could not support her. Not only has she never walked, but she has never spoken! With tears in her eyes, Mrs. Biltz-covitch told of the tragedy, and with grateful words did she receive an appointment to bring Mary to the hospital for examination.

Reading under the weight of seven-year-old Parkinson White, of 2937 North Twenty-sixth street, his mother carried him to see Mrs. Southwick. Parkinson cannot walk any distance, even with the help of braces, and the greatest distance he can travel is right around his own doorstep and from room to room. He is larger than the ordinary-sized boy of seven and because of this his mother has not been able to take him to the hospital often.

But reading of the promised visit of the great surgeon she made the effort and took her boy to the hospital for an appointment.

By tonight the total number of people registered will probably reach 300. No one is being turned away from the hospital, all will be examined and the worst cases be referred to Dr. Lorenz for first consideration.

FRIENDS SEEK FLOUR IN FAMINE CAMPAIGN

Want 1,000,000 Barrels for Russia. Appeal to Millers

One million barrels of flour for the famine sufferers in the Volga district of Russia is the goal set by the American Friends' Service Committee at 20 South Twelfth street.

The plans adopted by the Friends to get the flour are along new lines. Letters have been sent to millers all over the country asking them to make a direct contribution in flour, and to accept contributions from the communities about them. The millers will then sell at cost the flour which the committee buy from them. The Friends will pay all the costs of transportation upon the flour from the point of origin to the famine district.

The Friends are working in co-operation with Secretary Hoover and guarantee that every barrel given through them will reach the destitute people.
