Isamu Ogawa Here to Get Hospital Data to Take Back to Manchuria

COURSE AT PENN

American medical schools are the nest in the world, in the opinion of Dr. Isamu Ogawa, head of the Japanese Red Cross Hospital at Mukden, Manchurla, who is a student at the Gradurate School of Medicine of the Univerdty of Pennsylvania.

Dr. Ogawa has been in Philadelphia eren months on a three years' tour ground the world during which he is bsorbing the knowledge of the most fanous medical institutions to take back "Japanese medical students," said Dr. "like many of America, have always thought post graduate work ould be taken nowhere but in Germany. But I have come to realize we have been wrong.

Praise for Philadelphia

America, and especially Philadelphia, fers the finest graduate medical work to be obtained in the world, and when I go back to Japan and China I cerinly am going to make that fact

Dr. Ogawa said that physicians of the Orient are seeking knowledge of diges-Until after the Russian-Japanese War," said Dr. Ogawa, "digestive diseders were virtually unknown to the Japanese, because they had always lived on plain, simple foods.

The war introduced canned meats, and since then there has been a gradincrease in the consumption of meat nd wheat products.

"Meat was almost an unknown food before the Russian-Japanese War, and ince the late war it has become one of the most popular."
Dr. Ogawa said the most impressive feature of the American medical schools the splendid organization of the instions. The high standard of the faculty, he said is also another notable feature. He believes this has increased since the war.

Heads Large Hospital The hospital of which Dr. Ogawa is the head is the largest in Manchuria and the oldest of any consequence. Before the Japanese took their medical knowledge into Manchuria, he said, there were no hospitals at all except a few small institutions along the railroads. which were really dressing stations for necident cases.

Dr. Ogawa told of a peculiar custom a China of expressing thanks to the octor for recovery from a disease or he success of an operation.

He said after the patient is cured

the gate.

He said one of his patients upon whom he had performed an operation.

brought a tablet to the hospital that required twenty-six men to carry Studied Under Prof. Colman

Dr. Ogawa graduated from a medical thool in Fukuoka, Japan, about freen years ago. He has been study-ig in Philadelphia with Prof. Colman, the University of Pennsylvania. His specialization work has just been pleted and he sails December 13 for gland. After a tour of European tal early in 1923. He is a surgeon the Japanese Army having the rank Hentenant colonel.

Although he said Japan has fine institutions of medical instruction, they sannot compare with those of America. The foremost Japanese school Imperial University at Tokio.

THE HIGHER EFFICIENCY

The question of cost only cannot be applied in any business to either operation or material.

The question must always be, "What is the lowest cost, all things considered, that the material can be bought for or the operation be performed?"

When all things are considered it is found that the cheapest goods, the lowest cost, is not always the highest efficiency.

The difference between the dollar watch and the hundred dollar watch, the five-hundreddollar car and the five-thousand-dollar car, is the part that cannot be entirely standardized, the human element, the hand work, the personal inspection.

No house can afford to ask its purchasing agent "What is the very cheapest paper we can get for our stationery?"

And when the road is closed that way, there is the other alternative, "What is the best paper we can profitably use?"
