SINGLAR ADVISES OIL PREPAREDNESS

Petroleum Plentiful, but American Refiners Must Invest in Foreign Fields

Chicago, Dec. 9.—Fear of exhaustion of the world's supply of petroleum is a "bugaboo," Harry E. Singlar, chairman of the board of the Sinclair Consolidated Oil Corporation, declared yesterday before the American Petroleum Institute, in session here.

"There is plenty of petroleum and always will be," he said. "The great question is: Is America willing to pay the price for an adequate share of the world's supply?"

"America is the chief producer, but the day is coming when American refiners will not be able to furnish the world with petroleum," he said. "If she cannot get it from her own fields she must get it from foreign fields. If she cannot buy it from her own fields she must get it from her own fields."

BANK DISASTERS MENACE GERMANY

Big Palatinate Institution Goes Down and Five Others Are Reported on Rocks

Berlin, Dec. 9.—The failure of the Palatinate Bank—an important South German institution with an extensive network of branches scattered throughout Bavaria—in consequence of losses of 340,000,000 marks, or about $1,700,000, in exchange transactions is only a curtain raiser according to reports in Berlin financial circles of a number of other bank crashes. A West German institution whose directors recently assumed losses of 120,000,000 marks in exchange dealings and now have lost another 10,000,000 marks through the defalcation of a trusted employee, will, it is stated, declare insolvency.

Four Berlin banking institutions of the middle caliber are reported on the rocks and about to succumb payments because of losses due partly to failure to cover engagements in foreign exchange, which had a sudden sensational reversal in the course of the German currency, and partly to commitments in German securities in behalf of themselves and customers which became fatal when the German stock market fell and wiped out from a half to three of the paper value of even the most seasoned securities.

The precedent of the bank crash of 1901, when the failure of a Leipzig bank was followed by a series of other bank insolvencies, loomed up like the financial writing on the wall in German financial circles yesterday. A feeling of great nervousness and insecurity prevailed. The newspapers in their financial columns seek to counteract any panic sentiment among the general public by pointing out that the Palatinate failure, colossal as it is, with an absence of any sensationalism, but conservative and responsible financial organs, such as the Tagliche Rundschau and the Tagliche Rundschau and other newspapers prepare their readers for further collapses.

The Tagliche Rundschau warns the public against starting a run on Berlin banks, and points out that the South German failure, far from being a sign of general financial collapse, is only a sign of the normal fluctuations of the market.

The tremendous losses of the two provincial banks were due to the absence of proper control over exchange transactions of subsidiaries by the directors. An employee of the Palatinate Bank, in charge of the exchange department at Munich, accepted foreign drafts far in excess of the amount of the ultimate loss without taking the precaution to purchase the necessary amount to cover the drafts.

A catastrophe of far greater proportions was avoided by the action of the Deutsche Bank, one of the four powerful Big D banks and another institution closely allied with the Palatinate Bank. The two life-savers, it is said, were the Deutsche Bank and the Reichsbank, which were able to prevent a run on the Palatinate Bank, whose stock and reserve capital, were entirely wiped out by the unfortunate exchange transactions.

The German banking laws do not include the double liability of bank stockholders which prevails in America. The Palatinate stockholders therefore escape with the loss of their investment alone. The standing of the bank and the promptness of the collapse and which insured losses of about a hundred and forty million marks in addition.

Lower Freight Rates ASKED FOR STEEL

I. C. C. at Chicago Hearing Told of Relief Needed by Industry

Chicago, Dec. 9.—Chairman Toppliz, of the Republic Iron and Steel Company, told the Interstate Commerce Commission today that the steel industry here yesterday that "steel people would be well satisfied to be able to earn five per cent on their total property values, as they see no escape from continued losses, currently averaging per ton from 10 to 15 per cent, on invested capital."

He foresees no early, substantial readjustment without lower freight charges. "The steel industry," he said, "is in a position of financial straits. The public demand for lower costs has been very generally met by capital and labor outside of the transportation field."

Iron and steel prices have been reduced about 60 per cent and average less than 25 per cent above the ten-year pre-war average, with labor costs now 40 per cent above the pre-war level. The Republic's freight bill for slightly more than 5,000,000 tons was $7,610,000 last year, against $4,033,000 in 1913.

Increased ore production in the East and South has made the country more independent of the Lake Superior district, which should be restored to its old competitive status, he said. "The steel industry," he said, "is in a position of financial straits. The public demand for lower costs has been very generally met by capital and labor outside of the transportation field."

When Mr. Graves lifted his weary eyes to the face of the girl whose hands had left no resting memories during the long hours of his suffering, and he saw her for the first time with understanding, he shrank back. Elton, mother was dead, but the old man was conquered at last. He drew her hand to his cheek.

A little later he looked up with a faint smile. "Mercy, I don't care if you marry or have married, but I wish you were good as dead as I am."

She laughed. "Daddy, you're the victim of a plot. Ronald is the one who wouldn't marry him unless you and come over here and win your own accident—oh, you don't believe it! Well, you just watch me kiss him!"
