

FRANK GALT, 50, 251 East Cambria street, making brushes for street sweepers at the factory of the Lafferty Brush & Manufacturing Company, 1034-36 Rising Sun avenue. Bamboo is used for these brushes.

RINGLES INITIATION. Thomas W. McNamee, Pennsylvania Railroad engineer, was initiated into the Ringles secret society yesterday.

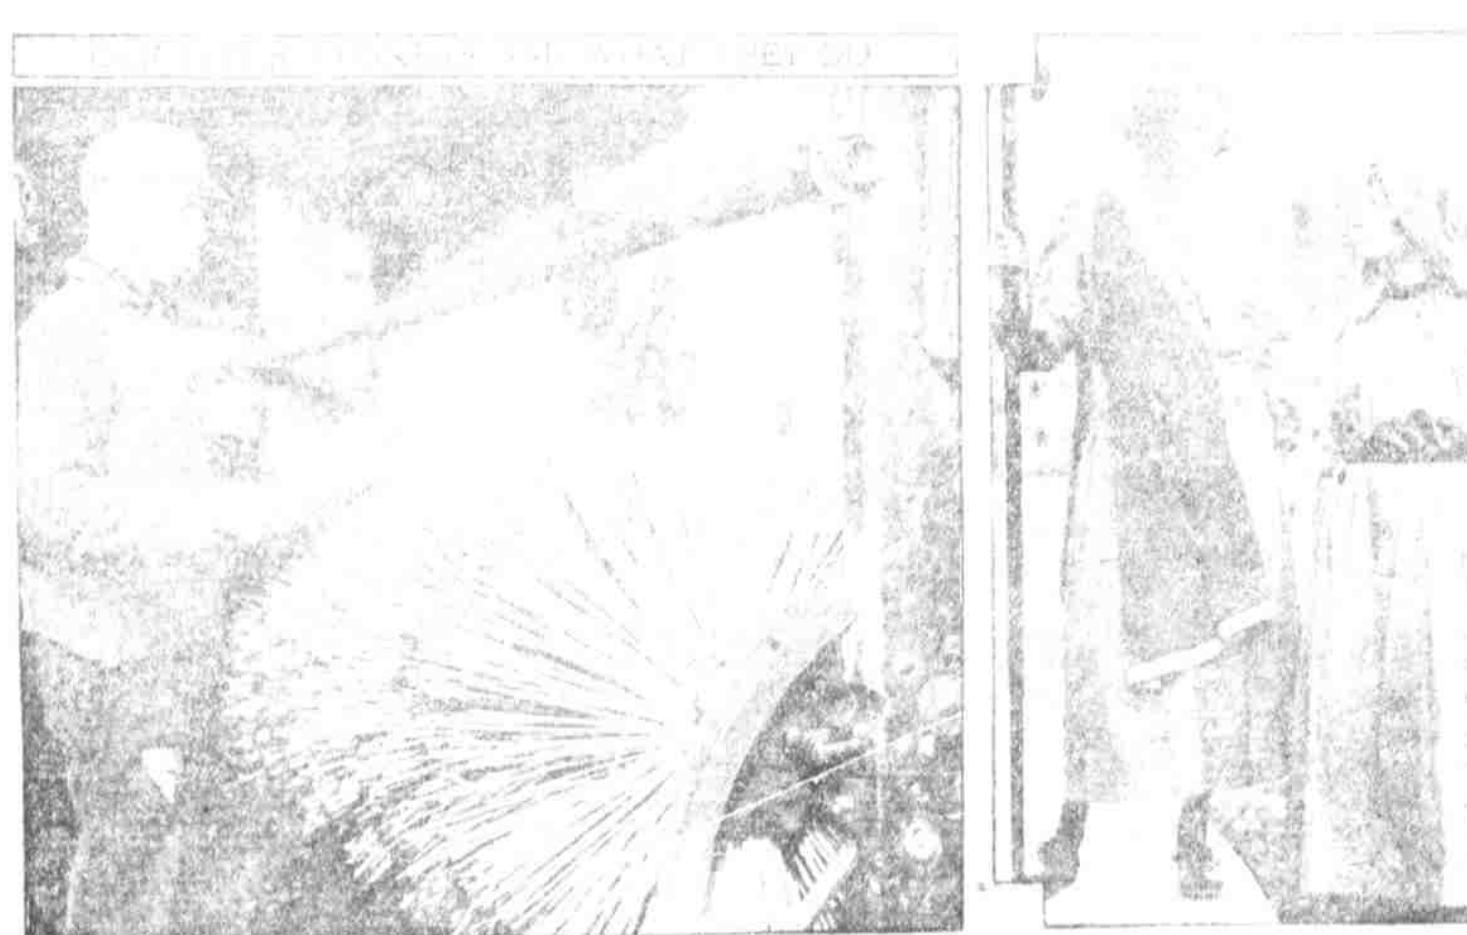

LAST NIGHT LOOKING EAST ON CHESTNUT STREET. When it all fell to earth. At the right is the Pennsylvania Railroad Office Building, an early example of steel construction, which was erected in 1892 to house the company's eastern headquarters. At the far left is the Baldwin Locomotive Works, the original United States Steel Works, and the Wadsworth Building. Here is a photograph of old Chestnut Street, looking east.

MISS ELIZABETH SCHAEFFER, Miss Philadelphia, holding a sign that says "YOUTH".

AT BROOKLYN INSTITUTE, Brooklyn, N.Y., where Mrs. Anna Green, play director, along with her students, put on a Christmas pageant yesterday. These added to the many groups employed.

FRANK GALT, 50, 251 East Cambria street, making brushes for street sweepers at the factory of the Lafferty Brush & Manufacturing Company, 1034-36 Rising Sun avenue. Bamboo is used for these brushes.

MARY CUPP (left) and MARY KELLEY IN OPEN-AIR SHOW. Girls of the Pacific Anna LeBarre school, Bryn Mawr, gave a Christmas concert yesterday. These girls were in the shepherd's scene.

PERRY GUAN is a member of the Pennsylvania Railroad Gun Club.

CHARLES H. HENRY, general bookkeeper, at the English National Bank. He is married, has three children and lives at 1638 Colwyn street. Motoring is his hobby.