A New Service

We greet the New Year by introducing a Savings Department

On the first business day of 1922 a Savings Department will be at the service of customers old and new of the First National Bank.

This savings department is a response to a long-held conviction on our part that the thrifty are entitled to such protection of their savings as institutions of great financial stability and enterprise afford.

It has been made practical for an institution of our size on account of the growing tendency to thrift and saving on the part of the people of this country and this city.

We have during our long life (and this bank is Number One in the National Bank System) had, to an unusual degree, the confidence of corporations, firms, partnerships, individuals and other banks as evidenced by the $30,000,000 or more of their money which they now have on deposit with us.

We believe that a similar confidence in the high responsibility of this bank will lead many new friends through our doors to deposit their savings with us.
