Cardinal Asks Prayers for Treaty Ratification

Belfast, Jan. 3 .- (By A. P.)-Cardinal Logue, the Primate of Ireland, addressing the congregation in the Armagh Cathedral, asked it to "that it might please the Almighty God to save them from such misfortune" as the rejection of the Anglo-Irish Treaty, which held worth the only hope of peace and tranquillity to Ireland. The only alternative to ratification, declared Cardinal Logue, was that the country would be thrown back into a state even more drastically oppressive than that through which it had already passed. The treaty, he said, seemed to give substantially all that was necessary for the welfare and progress of the beling were displayed by both sides in the resumption by the Dail Efreann today of debate on the Anglo-Irish treaty. The animosity between the factions seemed far more sharply drawn than days and was the outstanding feature of the opening session, which began shortly after 11 A. M. and was adjourned at 1:35 P. M. to 3:30 o'clock. Four speakers were heard at this session-Art O'Connor and Countess Markiewicz, opponents of the treaty, and Pierce Beasley and J. J. O'Connor asserted the campaign since the Dail's adjournment had in reality waged by people who had never done any good work for the country and were now "bowling at us." followed with a strong speech in favor of the treaty. He said he had waited vainly for some signs from the opponents of the treaty of sympathy for the poor, prostrate Irish nation. What the treaty's opponents called principles were merely political formulae and high pitched rhetoric, he declared. There had been no suggestion, continued Beasley, of an alternative policy or constructive statesmanship or any adleation of what would be done next if the treaty were rejected. Its opponents were not even united on their formulae, some of them talking isolation and others of external association. The lives of the Irish people, he declared, were being gambled with.

As long as the British went out of Ireland, what did it matter on what formulae they left? Mr. Beasley asked. Ireland had not fought for a republic, but for Ire'and for the Irish. He was one of the founders of the volunteers, bad served in the army ever midnight last night, and then released since, and had taken the oaths to the army and to the Dail, but like Eamon
