Nancy Wynne Tells of the Georges' Dance at the Bellevue-Stratford—Cushman Club Has Delightful Afternoon at Academy of Music

WELL, it was the Rose Gardens for us last night! And it was certainly a pretty dance. Mr. and Mrs. William Harmon George gave the party for their daughter, Martyn George, who, you remember, was "spoon girl" in the graduating class from Springdale last year.

Martyn's first name is Emma, but no one ever uses it. She is always called Martyn. She is tall and slender, with an abundance of dark hair, and is without exception one of the most popular girls of the year with every one. She looked awfully well in a frock of aqua marine green velvet with a touch of silver. Mrs. George wore a very nice and handsome gown of back velvet and black moire, cut on rather severe lines. There were about 300 guests.

The dancing was in the Rose Garden and the buffet supper was served in the South. Christmas greens and lights were used in the decorations, and the usual number of dinners preceded the affair.

IT SEEMS to me that the Charlotte Cushman Club's Actors' Afternoon was more and more interesting at each year's meeting. Yesterday Mr. Augustus Thomas was the principal speaker, and what interesting bits he had to give us from his vast and long-time experience. And Ethel Barrymore was just her attractive self. You know the date of the afternoon was changed from the 12th of January to the 6th that Miss Barrymore might be able to present.

When the Actors' Afternoon were planned, Miss Barrymore was scheduled to play in this city the week of the first meeting, and she accepted an invitation to appear. And then, as happens in the lives of all actors and actresses, her schedule was changed, and Miss Barrymore's company was unable to attend the meeting. Gladys Varesi appeared in her stead, and charmed her audience, too; but every one Miss Barrymore, so her appearance was much looked forward to. And when it was found that her company would not be here for the week of the 6th, there was nothing to do but to change the date of the afternoon, which every one agreed to gladly.

You know the talks have been transferred to the Academy auditorium from the foyer, and the original subscribers to the afternoons have reserved seats, while the rest of the house is thrown open to members of the former and latter to the Green Room and the Cushman Club guests file up to meet the guests of honor and speakers. It was all most interesting, and so many people one knows were there.

EVERY ONE is interested in the reception and musicale which Mrs. Harold Yarnall is giving this afternoon to meet Monsieur Vinson d'Indy. You know M. d'Indy is one of the great French composers, and he is to lead the Orchestra this week at the Academy—I mean he has been invited to lead by Stokowski.

He is a marvelous musician, and will give a recital this afternoon at Mrs. Yarnall's affair in his honor. Receiving with Mrs. Yarnall will be Mrs. Alexander Van Rensselaer, Mrs. Richard McCall Elliott, Mrs. Henry C. Boyer, Mrs. J. Madison Taylor, Mrs. Joseph Ledy, Mrs. John B. Thayer, Mrs. Luther Conradi, Mrs. Charles Edward Ingersoll, Mrs. Charles Platt, Mrs. Louis Breyer, Mrs. Charlotte Yarnall, Mrs. Alexander Britton Cox, Mrs. Adolfo Carlos Munoz, Miss Frances Wharton, Miss Caroline Sinker and Mrs. Stanley G. Flagg, Jr.

THEY were riding in town in the trolley together, and as they parted one called to the other: "My dear, don't forget to bring a handkerchief tomorrow, because mother said she cried at it. She said if she'd known it was so good, she would not have really said, 'But, Lou, don't cry.' responded the caller, "Neither did I, ever, my dear, but I do now; it's wonderful!" NANCY WYNNE.
