And would you believe also that the Mrs. Chancellor C. English, Mrs. J. Bertram Lippincott, Mrs. Pope Yeatman, Mrs. Joseph G. H. Molten, Mrs. Ralph Earle and Mrs. William G. Hopkins will receive temorrow afternoon with the Academy of Music? I am so interested to see it, as I know it's going to be very pretty and dainty. Some of the choruses represent flowers and the costumes are simply sweet. It was written by Mrs. George Dallas Dixon and is for the Seamen's Institute.

Mrs. Henry Tucker and Mrs. Thomas G. Ashton will be at home this afternoon at 1818 Pine street. No cards have been sent out.

She has that cute house out on Berkley road, Haverford, which every one calls "The Creaks" because it has a work that the same of the state of the same because it has a neat twotracked stone road entrance at the side back to the garage. It's the coolest-looking white house, all trimmed up in green and white-striped awnings in the summer and always looking like a new pin. I have not heard Babs' date for her debut yet, but have no doubt it will soon be in the making.

BETTY'S small cousins came to spend he day with her recently and they had a royally good time together. In fact, they played so hard and ran and jumped and laughed so much that Betty began to get very tired and sleepy. She did not realize just what was wrong, but she knew she wanted to be quiet. Her eyes felt heavy, she seemed for once in her life to have had all the ice cream she wanted for dessert. She sat quiet for a while, though the others begged for another game, then she went over to nurse and whispered to her: "Do you think they could be sent home now? I think I've had mough of this gay life for today."
