

DREAMLAND ADVENTURES

Wishing Night By DADDY

Jack and Janet are called out of bed by Perky Squirrel, who says the forest folks with a big dam he is building. They go with Perky Squirrel to see the dam.

CHAPTER II

Bucky Beaver's Big Dam

DRIP! Drip! Drip! The melting snow-water dropped from the pine trees like slow rain. Trickle! Trickle! Trickle! Little streams ran down the hillsides to join other little streams on their way into forest brooks and creeks. The South Wind had brought a great thaw to the woods. The balmy air whispered promises of the coming of spring; the melting snows flowed good-by to the grasses and flowers they had sheltered from Old Man Winter all through the freezing months. Jack and Janet were glad the South Wind had come. They were anxious to have him bring back the birds and sunshine and pleasant days.

But as Jack and Janet rode their ponies through the woods after Perky Squirrel, they were worried. Supposing Perky Squirrel's warning were true—supposing Bucky Beaver and his friends really were building a dam to drown all the forest folks. Then the dripping, trickling snow water might be made to fill the woods with a flood. And the flood might do untold harm.

Perky Squirrel chattered loudly when he saw the creek. "There, you see how high the water is getting," he croaked. "That is the creek Bucky Beaver is damming to flood the forest."

Jack and Janet looked anxiously at the creek. It seemed very harmless as its waters glistened in the moonlight. Jack laughed in relief. "Ha! Ha! That little creek couldn't drown a cat," he said.

"Eek! Eek! That is right," said Perky Squirrel. "And supposing that big river gets dammed so the waters can't get away—what happens then?" "The water backs up and makes a lake," he said.

"Well, before you laugh again, come and see what Bucky Beaver is doing," snapped Perky Squirrel. Jack and Janet followed him until they came to a place where the creek spread out into a pond which was covered with ice.

"What a dandy skating pond," cried Jack. "I wish we had found this place before the thaw began."

"Eek! Eek! That isn't a skating pond. This is a swimming pool!" declared Perky Squirrel. "Whose swimming pool?" asked Janet. "Bucky Beaver's swimming pool," replied Perky Squirrel. "And now he is turning it into a big flood by building his dam higher. See him at work there!"

Unique Girdle Marks Crepe de Chine Dress

By CORINNE LOWE

"It is an in-gray-tinted season. What is not black this year in the way of the afternoon frock is apt to be gray. And, as has been remarked at various times, the evening itself has progressed before the conquering mist. This partiality for the secrete gown of gray velvet or gray satin did not prove either a mere whim. As the winter advances the whim has settled into a conviction."

Today we show a smart combination of gray crepe de chine and silver and gray chiffon brocade. The pointy neck effect is attractive. So, too, is the arrangement of the waistline. This arrested girdle development is noted not only in frocks, but in the coats of suits.

For example, one encounters a black flannel coat designed for wear with a black and white check skirt—both for the South—held at the sides only.

Through a Woman's Eyes By JEAN NEWTON

THERE'S A LIMIT TO "DOING AS THE ROMANS DO"

"What astonishes me," a young husband complained the other day, "is that it is all so foreign to Ella's nature. It is no more natural for her to let her thought dwell for a moment on anything vulgar or coarse than to dip her hands in mud!"

Adventures With a Purse

I DO not know what your impression is, but my own idea was that having little girls' dresses made to order, while highly desirable, was an expensive matter. But let me describe one of the dresses ordered. It is pongee silk, of course, made with smocking at neck and sleeves in brown. The little Peter Pan collar is edged with a brown embroidery stitch and the whole frock is as quaint and charming as any I have seen—the sort you see in a magazine and wish wistfully that you could afford for your own little lady. This frock, made to order, and if I understand correctly in any color combination you like, is only $7.50, and, of course, every stitch is done by hand. I feel sure you will want to know of this place.

Then there are the necklaces which make such an effective addition to a plain, well-made gown. Carved Chinese olive nuts and Chinese crystal beads are well used. I have designed a necklace of carved olive nuts strung on a purple cord. You can picture for yourself how charming this would be. This and the others are especially priced at $3.50 each.

The Question Corner

Today's Inquiries 1. On what ground has Holland doubted the amount allowance of Queen Wilhelmina? 2. If oil has been spilled accidentally on a rug, how can the stain be taken out? 3. When the light behind a shade of the screen variety sheds too bright a glow in what simple manner can this be softened? 4. What is the correct weight for a boy forty-four inches tall; for a girl of the same height? 5. For the spring suit, what attractive feature is it strongly hinted that fashion will decree? 6. How does Paris trim a number of her smart serge frocks?

Yesterday's Answers

1. That women who are clerks are more conscientious than men is what the head of one large New York firm says. 2. If, when tweriting an envelope or card, one wishes to fill the space down to the very end, by clipping the top to a larger sheet of paper, it will be prevented from slipping out. 3. Since hard water does not clean the skin well, and is particularly bad to use in winter time, soften it and at the same time provide a mild bleach for the skin by adding a teaspoonful of lemon juice to a basin of water. 4. For a boy forty-three inches tall, the correct weight is 43.5 pounds; the right number of pounds for a girl of the same height is 43. 5. A good-looking ladies' effect is given to a sweater, without a great amount of trouble in putting in different patterns in, by having the sweater gray, with narrow, thread-like lines of red and black running across it, at intervals of four inches. 6. When a woman has dark hair, a particularly striking sort of headgear for her to wear with an evening frock is made of gold cloth, with tiny clusters of red berries twisted into it here and there.

After-Dinner Tricks

No. 67—Tumbler From Pocket To carry a tumbler filled with water in the pocket and remove it without spilling a drop seems an impossibility, but it is quite easily accomplished. Procure a piece of thin rubber and stretch it across the mouth of the tumbler. Secure the rubber with an elastic band. The tumbler may then be carried in the pocket as long as you desire. In removing it from the pocket first slide off the rubber and bring out the glass alone. Copyright, 1922, by Public Ledger Company
