The very fact, however, that he is so conspicuous for his good qualities makes his attitude on the Sabbath question all the more harmful. It is easy for those of us who are seeking to safeguard the old-fashioned American Sabbath to hattle against its force on the oath to battle against its foes on their own ground, but when voices are raised in behalf of a loose observance of the day from within the Christian ranks, it is difficult to reply, and such counsels, therefore, do infinite harm.

The Church of Christ has been in the past the creator of the great ideals which have made possible those simple yet fundamentally important virtues which lie at the foundation of our civ-ilization. The Church has created and conserved the ideals of female chasconserved the ideas of female chas-tity, masculine honor, the sanctity of the marriage vow, the integrity of home life and the right rearing of childhood. These are very simple things, and yet they are vital to the health and the prosperity of our modern life. Yes, it is true—that these essential virtues is true that these essential virtues ive been generated and preserved by e Christian Church. Paganism did to know them. Now, the Church, turn, is made possible only by right observance of the Sabbath ay. It is a self-evident truth that if men do not stop to worship and to learn of God, there cannot be a church, and if there is no church, then these fundamental simplicities will speedily be lost to the race and the whole splen-did structure of our modern life will go toppling down in the spiritual and moral ruin which overtook other great ivilizations of the past which forgot

Now, the encroachment of popular amusements upon the Lord's Day is very insidious and subtle. These things open the door for more ruinous abuses, which finally completely destroy the day, as we have seen in the case of odern Europe. Sabbath observance is social sanity, and we cannot infringe upon the sanc-tity of the day at one point without leading to its final destruction at all points. I repeat, therefore, that the high character of Senator Pepper makes his condoning of these abuses for his fine qualities of mind and heart, that he may, through prayer and deeper meditation, come to a change of views at this particular point.

Johnson Paintings Not Restored

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger: Sir-May I ask you to be so very kind as to correct a misstatement in this evening's issue of your paper, which. while it seems trifling, is, in reality, of considerable importance to the point at issue. I did not say, as quoted in the EVENING PURLIO LEDGER of today, that "The White Girl," by Whistler, had never been restored, because I know nothing of the condition of any one of the three pictures to which Whistler gave that name.

Muscle Shoals

To the Editor of the Evening Public Leaguers Sir-The public has read a great deal of late about Muscle Shoals without being made any wiser as to what it consists of, the nature and availability of the property, why the Government bought it, and what it intended to do with it. It seems to have been another of the numberless foolish purchases the Wilson Government so recklessly made.

Is Ours Really a "City of Brotherly Love"?

Philadelphia Sociability the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger Sir—The correspondence on the topic of Philadelphia's sociability is sometimes amusing and sometimes the reverse. It is hardly good form to bid the stranger go hence who complains of his loneliness, but again no stranger is justified in uttering slander and general charges against our city. Does he expect us to kiss, embrace and feed him gratis?

Such people are not invited to homes. Some people regard me as "old-fash-ioned" because I object to questionable anecdotes, disrespectful remarks about parents and levity on sacred topics. I have traveled much and have seen fast life in the great capitals of the world, but thank God, my ideals remain un-

God gave me such a mother as is seldod gave me such a mother as is seldom given to men and perhaps this has always kept me from straying too far in the paths which lead to destruction. I am fond of music, athletics and the opera. I enjoy a good dinner, and before prohibition came in I occasionally indulged in a glass of light wine, so I may say I am not a spoil-sport or insensible of the decent pleasures of life.

It is a curious paradox that frequently a loose-living man shrinks from commencing a friendship with his kind. Finally, the maudin sentimentality which releases human beasts from jail on parole or after trifling sentences inculcates caution in the average Phila-

Why shouldn't they the more harmful in its effects, and I be all in? For instance, they go to sincerely trust, as one who admires him for his fine qualities of mind and heart, about 8:30 A. M. There is to be a parade of some kind at 11 A. M., and they come home about 3 P. M. By the time they shave, get a meal, etc., there is no time left for sleep, only a short nap, and in that way they don't see much of their children. I would like to hear from others on this subject, or how their opinions differ.

I am a middle-aged man of no specially prepossessing appearance who has lived in San Francisco, Chicago, New York, London, Glasgow, Belfast, Paris, Berlin and Budapest and must frankly say that I have nothing whatever against this city. I have foregathered with men in business, in restaurants on the trains and on the trains and in our parks, and have gentrand them courteous and friendly.

Several have asked me to their homes, and introduced me to their homes, and introduced me to their wives and families. Without wishing to be critical, I would suggest that some of the folks who have complained of want of hospitality were themselves to blame, in so far as they might have any men friendly.

In Philly for nearly a year and the people and city suit me all right. I am thirty-six years old and sigteen of my years have been spent roaming the U.S. A., Canada and Mexico. I have lived in cities I have liked better, and many I did not like as well, and if thought the people of Philly did not what they think of me, and cannot see why these world-nice strangers should, care. In my travels I have met many people and cannot say they are any more friendly to me than the people of Philly.
