

PENN TOYS WITH DELAWARE FIVE

Grave and His Mates Hang Up Twelfth Straight Win by 37-to-17 Score

FRESH BEAT CENTRAL H. S.

EDDIE McNICHOL'S University of Pennsylvania's quintet warmed up for the Navy game by trouncing Delaware 37 to 17 last night in Weightman Hall before the smallest crowd of the season.

Fair Golfers Change Club Name to Women's National

New York, Jan. 26.—Miss Marion Hollins, women's national golf champion, has announced that the name of the golf club that will be devoted exclusively to players of the fair sex has been changed from the Glen Head Golf and Tennis Club to the Women's National Golf and Tennis Club.

The entire Penn team got into the scoring column. Rosenast, Huntzinger and Vogel each getting one field goal. Five minutes before the game ended Eddie McNichol sent in an entirely new team, which scored two points and had four scored on it.

The result of the game gave an excellent indication of the relative strength of Penn and the Navy which meet here Saturday night. The Mid-dies triumphed over the Peach State five 38 to 12.

BRUGGY APPEARS WITH WILKES-BARRE

Receives His Usual Salutation From Camden Fans, and Locals Win by Score of 37-25

COSTELLO IS LET OUT

The basketball fans at Camden were treated to a surprise last evening in the Eastern League game between Wilkes-Barre and Camden.

The Wilkes-Barre team had made a big change over night in its line up. Three players—"Chief" Muller, George Norman and Brennan—were let out, and Bruggy and "Nig" Foster signed in their places.

The Barons gave the Skooters a run in the initial half, and were ahead for the first ten minutes. After Dave Kerr tied the score at 8, a pair of baskets by Campbell sent them ahead, and they finished at the half in the lead at 18 to 13.

That Second Half. But in the second half the Skooters showed their worth. They jumped the totals to 24, and then Eddie Dolin retired in favor of Grimstead, making his debut.

Then the visitors made five and stopped. The game ended 37 to 25. Because the contest finished Dolin came back, going to guard in place of Neil Deighan.

The feature shot of the night was a one-handed overhead circus stab by "Soup" Campbell at the start of the second half.

Manager Kennedy announced that he had given Costello his unconditional release. He wants to play regularly, and has received a good offer from the Adams, Mass., team, where he will play.

Basketball Needs Men Who Understand Game

The biggest need of basketball today is managers who know the game. One-half dozen men of this caliber could do more to put the sport on its feet than any other thing.

At Yonah Hall the other evening the Grace Midgets were lamped in action. They weigh about seventy-five pounds and average ten-thirteen years.

The passing and teamwork of the youngsters was about as remarkable as has ever been seen in a game, and well known downtown.

The Philadelphia Manufacturers' League is staging a great second-half race. The leaders have secured new players and now the tail-enders have followed suit.

In the first game, Philadelphia Terminal will line up against Art Loom Terminal.

Fliesher and Keystone Telephone, both second division teams, have new men.

Here's the way they take the floor against each other. Fliesher: Atherholt and Gray, forwards; O'Connell, center; Livingstone, and Kilpatrick, guards.

Keystone: Calhoun and Keating, forwards; Moorehead, center; Black and Kelly, guards.

The American Basketball League, the oldest cage organization in history, has weathered the storm and will finish the season with four of the eight clubs starting a close race for the championship.

But the managers looked around and decided to reduce the overhead about half. They secured new playing quarters and since moving to Third and Brown streets they have succeeded in not only making expenses, but have really made money on the games played.

The schedule for tonight calls for Twentieth Century to tackle Holy Name, and in the other contest American Independents meet Alpha. Larry Sommer has an entire new club representing Alpha, and expects to be in the running for second half honors.

What Happens When Two Women Love the Same Man?

Ruby Ayres' gripping love story, "A Man's Way," which starts in the Evening Public Ledger Wednesday, February 1, deals with just such a problem as one meets in the realities of life.

John Harden, thirty-eight, with an attractive personality, who has won his way to wealth from poor beginnings, comes to the assistance of Molly Dangerfield, the pretty twenty-year-old daughter of a large, aristocratic, but poverty-stricken old family.

"The other woman" is Mrs. Lillith Fernald, a good-looking and not ill-disposed woman, to whom Harden had been engaged years before. To guard against a recurrence of his old love for Lillith, he marries Molly, who really loves him. Molly realizes Harden's purpose in marrying her.

Which of these two women found happiness? Was there a reconciliation? What is the answer to this "Eternal Triangle"? Be sure to read
