

BORAH AIDS LEAGUE BY ASSAILING PACT Single-Handed Foe of Pacific Treaty Aims to Line Up Wilson Democrats NOW FORGING THUNDERBOLT

By CLINTON W. GILBERT Staff Correspondent, Evening Public Ledger Copyright, 1922, by Public Ledger Company Washington, Jan. 27.—Senator Borah is preparing to make his fight against the four-power pact upon League of Nations lines; that is to say, modified League of Nations lines without any articles. And, curiously, the leader of the "irreconcilables" is becoming the chief advocate for American participation in world affairs.

Even cancellation of the allied debt, under proper conditions, has no terrors for Mr. Borah. It is a remarkable indication of the weakness of Democratic leadership that a Republican should be furnishing the opposition with the grounds upon which it may stand against the pact. Take Borah's two proposed amendments to the treaty. In place of the agreement of the four nations to respect their rights in relation to their insular possessions and insular dominions, Mr. Borah would have them agree to respect the territories and rights of all free nations, great and small.

Mr. Borah would erect thus a little League of Nations in the Pacific. Mr. Wilson, although not taking issue in the fight for the pact, privately opposed it on the ground that it is an alliance. Mr. Borah, in effect, with this amendment, attacks it on the same ground. Not Likely to Defeat Pact League of Nations Democrats who follow Mr. Wilson can join with Mr. Borah in support of that amendment. They are likely to do so, but probably not enough to furnish a one-third vote against the treaty.

Mr. Borah may have another line of attack in his second proposal, that when the four powers, faced by the threat of aggressive action, meet together to consider the measures to be taken, they shall be restricted to the taking of "peaceful measures." This again is an attack upon the pact as an alliance. It also squares with Mr. Borah's record as an opponent of Article X.

To the Democrats it gives an argument to be used against the Republicans who had objected to the league covenant on the ground that it fore-shadowed military activities. The Democrats may say to the Republicans: "You are so anxious to safeguard this country against military participation in world affairs. Here is your chance. Put in the word 'peaceful'."

Mr. Borah is an invitation to the Democratic party to function neutrally. He furnishes them with their position ready-made. He gives them their arguments. One does not see any sign that response has taken place in the intellectual apparatus of the Democrats.

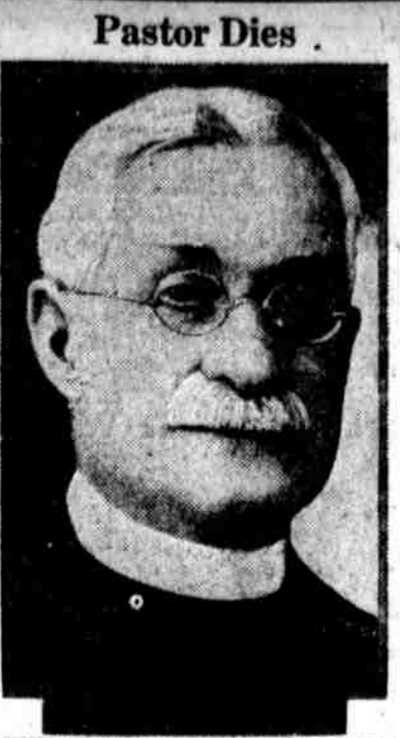

Fighting Single-Handed Mr. Borah is in a singular position in Congress. So far as there is any opposition, he is the opposition. Single-handed he counts for more than the whole Democratic party.

What is Mr. Borah's game? No body can see he has any game. There is the big agricultural bloc movement in the Republican Party. Mr. Borah apparently has more brains and ability than all the rest of the party put together. An ambitious man in Mr. Borah's place would put himself at the head of the former movement. But Mr. Borah stays in the background, one of the inconspicuous members of the bloc.

The bloc may nominate a candidate for President. Hiram Johnson is sidetracked. His day is past. But who is Borah? Not bothering about the farmer vote at all, but tinkering up the four-power pact that the Wilson Democrats may find some logical ground for opposing it.

Steadily Mr. Borah is becoming more and more absorbed in foreign relations. "The trouble with Borah is that he likes too well to think," said some one recently. Foreign relations have become immensely interesting to certain minds in this country, and Mr. Borah is one of those minds.

Hard to Find Foreign Issue But how do you get yourself personally by devoting yourself to foreign relations? Where do you find an issue in foreign relations? Some men think one will arise. Representative Kelly, of Michigan, is going into the primaries against Senator Townsend this year for re-election. American participation in the economic re-establishment of Europe even to the cancellation of the allied debts. But few are so bold.

Pastor Dies THE REV. JOSEPH R. T. GRAY of Old Radnor M. E. Church, succeeded to heart attack. He has served nine congregations in Philadelphia.

REV. JOSEPH R. T. GRAY DIES WHILE AT DINNER

Pastor of Radnor M. E. Church Victim of Heart Attack In the midst of a pleasant chat at the dinner table last night, the Rev. Joseph R. Taylor Gray, pastor of the Old Radnor M. E. Church, suddenly sank back in his chair and died in the parsonage, 1003 Old Lancaster road, Bryn Mawr.

A physician who was called within a few minutes told a daughter, Mrs. Robert F. Hunter, that her father died at the moment of the heart attack. He was born in Berlin, Md., September 12, 1843. In the Civil War Dr. Gray was chaplain of the Fifty-third Pennsylvania Volunteers. In 1864 he became a member of the Philadelphia Conference and for years was its oldest effective member, carrying the conference with him. He was married in 1868 to Miss Elizabeth Neall, of West Philadelphia, who died eleven years ago.

Of the ten children born to them six survive, together with seven grandchildren. The surviving members of the family are Dr. Joseph R. Taylor Gray, Jr., city bacteriologist of Chester; Mrs. F. R. Granger, of London; the Rev. Frank M. Gray, pastor of St. Stephen's Church, Germantown; Mrs. Robert F. Hunter, who lived with her father; and Mrs. H. D. Mcgary, London. Dr. Gray had been pastor in nine-teen congregations in this city, Lansdowne, Bethlehem and other places, and had been secretary and district superintendent of the Philadelphia Conference.

HARVEY TO MEET POINCARE MONDAY

Appointment to Discuss Genoa Conference, Set for Today, Is Postponed TO ANNOUNCE U. S. POLICY

By the Associated Press Paris, Jan. 27.—The conference between George Harvey, American Ambassador to Great Britain, and Premier Poincare, which had been scheduled for today, was postponed until Monday. Myron T. Herrick, United States Ambassador to France, will participate in Monday's meeting.

The meeting is looked upon as unusually important in view of the statement of Mr. Harvey last night that before returning to London he would make clear to the French Government the American viewpoint on the proposed Genoa conference, as well as the world's financial and economic position generally.

The decision of President Harding as to United States participation in the Genoa conference is thought to hang largely on the results of these conversations. Mr. Harvey is expected to inform Mr. Poincare that the United States will participate at Genoa and in European economic reconstruction generally also is considered as somewhat dependent, aside from French participation, upon some solution of the reparations question and upon a sincere indication on the part of European countries that they are trying to balance their budgets and to reduce their armaments and other burdens which are regarded as unnecessary by America.

married sister, Mrs. Myrtle Lewis, twenty-one, are the heroines. Their alertness and pluck prevented what the police believe was a carefully planned attempt to get several hundred dollars in cash from the home of Miss Mary Mjersa, 1229 Ritner street.

It was Laura who discovered the robbers at work. She is active at the Church, at Broad street and Moyamensing avenue. She surprised the robbers on her way home, entered her father's house, and called her sister Myrtle, and told her to telephone the police, and continued to watch the men from a window until the police arrived.

Two of the three men were captured. They were John Brennan, seventeen, of 2516 South Twelfth street, and John Callahan, twenty-five, of 2033 South Rosewood street. The third man escaped.

Though Detective Moyland, the girl's father, was in the house, they did not bother to call him, feeling competent to handle the situation. He came downstairs when he heard them moving excitedly, and they asked him to look at the men to see if his more experienced eye would not confirm their suspicions.
