

Mrs. Wilson Tells About Chaudiere And Gives Delicious Recipes for It

This French Dish Is Our Own Chowder, and There Are Many Tasty and Tempting Ways of Making It

By MRS. M. A. WILSON

The early French settlers in Canada brought with them the chaudiere, a large kettle in which they cooked chaudiere or bouillie, a sort of thick stew with vegetables. From this comes our American chowder.

Chaudiere de Lapin (Rabbit Chowder) This is a delicious favorite of the French, and is prepared as follows:

One-quarter pound of salt pork, minced very fine. One cup of finely chopped onions.

Cook very slowly until the fat pork melts. Then add the rabbit and carrots.

Fish Chowder The New England housewife, ever thrifty, usually uses the heads of cod and other fish for this dish.

Chowder of Clams Wash six large clams and place in a kettle. Add three cups of cold water.

Clam Chowder, Boston Style Wash six large clams and place in a kettle. Add three cups of cold water.
