M. B. MEDARY, JR. Talks on Zoning in Large Cities

ZONING in a large city is to its physical welfare exactly what the laws of order are to its social well-being...

The Matter of Area
Fully as important as the matter of height is that of area. The opponents of zoning have claimed that some of its features amount to practical confiscation...

The Regulations of Use
The third great element of zoning is the use to which buildings shall be put. It is claimed by the opponents of the zoning plan that such regulations will prevent the small householder from doing business in his own residential block...

Spreading the Business Section
The right theory of the transit loop was that the transit lines, instead of being cut in New York, as the business section of that city extended north, first to Fourteenth street, then to Twenty-first, then to Forty-second and so on...

HUMANISMS

By WILLIAM AHERTON DU PUY, Charles M. Schwab, of Bethlehem, Pa., in charge of that special car in which the marshal of France rode about the country when he was visiting over here...

Well, Mr. Schwab sent this car and Joe came up to Montreal to get Admiral Beatty, which feat was accomplished, Joe was very deferential, they all alone in the car with the hero of Jutland, but when the admiral made the advances, being of a sociable race, the attendant snarled out: Here was the way it started...

Next morning by the time breakfast was out of the way they were down about Syracuse and the admiral proposed a resumption of their diversion. All day long they staked wagers upon the train that man to be the Goddess of Chance. When the train finally came to a stop, so absorbed were they that they did not even look up...

Mrs. Helen H. Gardner, premier woman official of the Government, one that was living in New York, a very satisfactory Chinese servant. Finally he told her that he must leave her, but that he would secure another reliable man in his place, and would stay long enough to train that man to his duties. He asked her to bear with the new man a bit, as he knew German, but not English...

Apropos of the American university of learning, Representative Roscoe C. Patterson of Springfield, Mo., tells the following story of a discussion of the masterpieces of Mark Twain, which took place while he was campaigning in the district of an associate. (The incident could not have happened among his own constituents.) "You have read Mark Twain, I suppose," he said to a voter. "Have you read his 'Huckleberry Finn'?"

"No, I can't say as how I hav," was the reply. "Well, you have read 'Tom Sawyer'?" queried Mr. Patterson. "Nary a line," came the admission. (The incident could not have happened among his own constituents.) "You know 'Auld nicker' Wilson," "Oh, yes," came the quick reply. "I voted for him."

When the Prince of Wales was over here, he was given a dinner in New York. So he would be advisable to have a bit of Scotch for His Highness and sent envoys scurrying about downtown New York. It was quite a job to get the beverage, and as a matter of fact the dinner was delayed somewhat on account of the effort.

The Prince showed a bit of a tendency to spoof the habits of royalty of distributive honors for small courtesies when he asked: "Whom are we to decorate for this?"
