You've met the "flopper." You find the "flopper" more often among the males of the species than the females. He might also be called a "loller" or a "draper." He's the chap who lolls about and drapes bimself over whatever furniture happens to be handy.

Most people find him irritating. They think he lacks proper regard for con-ventions and respect for persons. They don't like the way he drapes one leg over the arm of the chair in which he is sitting, and the loose-jointed, spreadengle way in which he clutters up the scenery.

But let's go deeper. "Flopping" is more of an indication of character than this. It is not only the outward sign of an inward mental characteristic, but it is a physical habit which, if cultivated or allowed to grow, gradually and actually produces the mental characteristic.

This sort of person, you will always find, is both bonstful and egotistical He has a fine opinion of himself, which often is the only thing which prevents the opposition opinion being unanimous. But he is no man to be depended upon. Don't make the mistake of expecting any appreciation of responsibility from

Carelessness of posture cultivates carelessness of mentality, and since the converse is true, the easiest way for "flopper" to begin his regeneration the s to cease flopping and cultivate erectness, decision and poise of bearing.
