

SYNDICATE TAKES ENTIRE CITY LOAN

$5,000,000 Issue Awarded to Drexel & Co. and Its Associates

MADE FOR "ALL OR NONE"

A $5,000,000 city bond issue for which bids were opened at noon today was awarded at a public banking syndicate which alone took all or none of the securities.

Drexel & Co., Brown Brothers & Co., the Guaranty Trust Company, of New York, and the Union Trust Company of Pittsburgh, made up the successful syndicate.

Although sixteen bids were received, none of them offering a premium, the syndicate bid at par with the only offer large enough to absorb the whole issue, which is to be used for general improvements.

DREAMLAND ADVENTURES

The Little Old Gray Man's Secret

By DADDY

Jack and Janet want the birds to dwell in their dooryards. A little old gray man brings them a spring-time surprise, which proves to be a toy village made of bird houses.

CHAPTER III

The Village in the Air

JACK and Janet looked with delight at the tiny bird houses made by the little old gray man. They looked just as pretty and cozy as real houses.

"Where shall we put them?" cried Jack, glancing around the yard.

"On the front lawn," suggested Janet. "There the birds will have nice grass on which to walk."

"Ho! Ho! Ho! That would be fine if the birds didn't have bad neighbors," laughed the Birdhouse Hermit.

"But sometimes unwelcome callers come. There is one now."

Jack and Janet looked up quickly. The Birdhouse Hermit was pointing to a sunny spot on the porch. There lay Tommy Cat, gazing at them with curious eyes.

"Tommy Cat would like us to put the bird houses on the lawn," said the Birdhouse Hermit.

"Then he would have easy hunting whenever he wanted a bird for lunch. But we are going to put these bird houses out of Tommy Cat's reach."

The Bird House Hermit got an ax and a saw from his little old gray wagon, and led Jack and Janet into the woods. He searched until he found a tall, straight young sapling. He cut this down and trimmed off the branches—all except five limbs that forked off from the trunk away at the top.

Each of these five limbs curved outward and then upward.

At the tip of one of the limbs the little old gray man set up a tiny bungalow, bracing it so it would stand firmly no matter how much the pole might be shaken by the wind.

At the tip of a second limb he placed a second house, and at the tip of a third he placed a store, at the tip of a fourth he placed the fire engine station, and at the very top of the tallest limb he placed the church.

"Hurrah!" cried Janet in delight. "That makes a village in the air."

"Ho! Ho! Ho!" laughed the Bird House Hermit. "And tomorrow the village will be filled with happy birds gaily singing."

Janet noticed that the doors of the buildings on the pole were very small.

"Can birds get in there?" she asked.

"The kind of birds we want to get in are," laughed the Bird House Hermit.

The doors had narrow slits running up and down and sidewise from them.

"What are those slits for?" asked Jack.

"Ho! Ho! Ho! Those slits are a bit of cleverness on my part," laughed the little old gray man.

"When Mr. and Mrs. Wren bring straws and sticks to build their nests inside the houses they can get them through those slits without any trouble. Otherwise the straws and sticks would catch against the sides of the door."

The little old gray man dug a hole and placed the bottom of the pole in this. Jack and Janet held the pole steady while he packed the earth around it, making it stand solid.

Another house, with larger doors, was placed at the end of a taller pole. "This is for the Purple Martins," explained the little old gray man.

Other tiny houses he hung from the branches of trees about the door yard.

"These are for the Blue Birds and such songsters as want to dwell near you," he said.

Last of all, the little old gray man brought out of his wagon a great sign which he fastened to the pole that held the Wren village. This sign said:

BIRDTOWN

Price—Cosy Apartments—For Rent

Songs at Dawn and Songs at Twilight.

"That is just like signs I have seen on city apartments," said Jack.

"But the city apartment signs say: 'No Children Wanted.'"

"Ho! Ho! Ho!" laughed the little old gray man.

"We will fix that." With crayon pencils he neatly added eight words to the sign, and Jack and Janet laughed when they saw the words.

"What do you think the eight words were?" In tomorrow's chapter Jack and Janet find a mystery in Birdtown.

Uncommon Sense The Man Who Wears Out

By JOHN BLAKE

IT IS the grindstone that wears down the steel, not the steel the grindstone. The knives in the plane in smoothing the plank lose but little of their edge compared to the impression they make upon the plank.

There is always wear in life and labor, but the tools that are selected for their purpose wear far less than those which are picked up and employed haphazard.

You will often read in obituary notices of men who have worn themselves out by hard work.

In nine cases out of ten it was not hard work, but inability to do the sort of work they attempted which wore them out.

The man who is suited to his job enjoys it, and enjoyment of work is an excellent lubricant.

The man who doesn't understand his job, and who is afraid that he cannot do it well, is the man who continually worries, and who rapidly wears down. The work is harder than the man.

If you want to live long (as most people do) take for your life work something you like to do and then learn how to do it.

The competent man doesn't need to worry. He knows that the job isn't going to beat him. He does not hesitate to begin it because of his fear that he will begin it in the wrong way and founder aimlessly through the day.

He tackles it with confidence, because he has mastered his trade. And the day, instead of being beset with difficulties and exasperations, is merely pleasant progress toward further development.

Nothing is so enjoyable as doing effective work which you know how to do, and to do well.

Nothing is more satisfactory than the evening's rest after a good job has been well done. If you have ever seen a competent workman sit back and look at a completed task, you know how little the doing of it has taken out of him.

The discontented, the overstraining, the nervous wrecks are men who do not know how to do things, yet try to do them just the same. Don't be one of them. Don't spend your whole life in unavailing efforts to do what other men do easily.

The friction, the unnecessary work, not the actual work, will wear you out, and leave you exhausted and spent, and dependent upon others for support at a time of life when your brain and your usefulness to mankind should be at their height.

ELECTION AT HAMMONTON

Factions Unite on Compromise Candidates for School Board

Hammonton, N. J., Feb. 15.—The School Board election here last night resulted in the acceptance of compromise candidates. Those elected were Herbert Doughty, a former member, and Charles M. Phillips and Matthew Cappucco, new members.

Italian residents of the town, who outnumber the Americans, but have fewer qualified voters, had planned an all-Italian ticket, to which those of other nationalities were going to oppose an all-American ticket.

At the last moment, however, the two rival factions decided on the compromise slate, which was elected without opposition.

The voters also authorized the appropriation of $80,000 to be raised by taxation, as the township's share of the expense of the schools. The remaining sum of the entire cost of conducting the schools will be defrayed by the State.

WAR DEPARTMENT

"After that," said the man, "It's not the mule's fault"

Blame for injury depends on how much chance the victim had to make himself safe.

"The first time a mule kicks me," said a wise man, "it's the mule's fault. If it happens again, it's my fault."

A good many people are staying within kicking distance of tea or coffee, who have had a chance to know better.

They have learned that tea or coffee at night keeps them awake. They know it whips up the nerves. They know what medical opinion has so often said about the effect of the drug element in tea and coffee upon the nervous system—and how indigestion, headaches, high blood pressure and various ills so often follow the use of tea or coffee.

Knowing this, they fail to keep out of the way. Where does the blame belong, then, when the final break-down comes?

There's safety in Postum, and charm, too. Postum has a full, rich flavor much like that of the better grades of coffee, and it is free from any harmful element whatsoever.

Whether or not you've had your warning from tea or coffee, why not step over on the safe side? Why not do what so many others have done—try Postum for ten days, learn how delightful and satisfying it is—and learn how much improvement there can be for you?

You can get Postum wherever good food and drink are sold or served, and it only takes a word from you to your grocer or restaurant waiter, to make this move to the safe side, at once.

Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) made instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages of larger bulk, for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared) made by boiling for 20 minutes.

A Flavor that comes 9830 miles as the crow flies

FROM far off India and tropical Java come the rare spices that so temptingly flavor IVINS SPICED WAFERS.

Once you have tasted this unusual cookie you can fairly picture in your mind's eye the tropical plantations where these savory spices are grown—you can see hundreds of natives loading the huge steamships that carry these spices over 9830 miles to Philadelphia wharves.

And if you could come to our bakery some day this week you would actually see these spices weighed and blended—then carefully mixed with a batter prepared according to an old recipe that has been handed down from generation to generation.

There's something unusual about IVINS SPICED WAFERS. They have a different flavor—a distinctive taste.

Nobody has ever been able to duplicate this old-time recipe that only Ivins possess. And we frankly believe, that nobody ever will.
