Hampton at Stanley Next Week-"Theodora" on Stanton Screen-George Arliss in Comedy at Aldine. Many New Films-Other Notes

most interesting film debuts next week will be "Star Dust." at the Stanley; "Theodora." at the Stanton, and "The Ruling Passion," at the Aldine.
The first has Hope Hampton as its young star, and claims the pen parentage Tannie Hurst, though she disclaims the relationship. "Theodora" is Sardou's famous drama, made into a screen spectacle by an Italian company. "The Ruling Passion" marks George Arliss' bow to pictures as a full-sedged comedian after the sober seriousness of "The Devil" and "Disraeli."

"My Boy" concerns a parentless immigrant youngster who eludes the guards at Ellis Island and makes the friendship of old "Captain Bill." One of the most interesting features of the picture is the fact that "Captain Bill" is played by Claude Gillingwater, whose "Earl of Dorincourt," in "Little Lord Fauntleroy," was one of the nosable pieces of acting in the last twelve months.

Gillingwater, who played here on the stage in "Three Wise Fools," a ple of seasons ago, is one of the dditions the screen has ever If it had more Theodore Roberts Gillingwaters it would reach a standard. He (that is, Gilling-t) is now playing a lead in a Mar-touan drama.

Centor and His Songs Where does Eddie Cantor, who comes here next week in "Make It Snappy," at the Shubert, get his songs? Cantor, Jolson and Fred Stone always sing successful numbers. Naturally these three comedians have the pick of the market; music publishers know that if any of these men takes up a song, it will be given every possible chance to make a hit. As a result, the lives of these players are made almost miserable by the mob of composers, publishers and "touts" who dog their footsteps, wait for them in hotel lobbies, push their way into dressing rooms, in cafes, follow them down the streets. Cantor travels with a piane and an accompanist for the sele purpose of trying out the many songs that are brought to him or sent him.
