Why Demand Age?

the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger: Sir-I would like to suggest, through your interesting "Forum" column, the advisability of limiting the question regarding age in every respect in which it is required, for it is an incentive for more false swearing than any other question. is over forty-five years of age.

The question of age should never by Dr. David M. Steele will perform the ceremony.

Ocean City would like to have a train service like this to contend with. The Pennsylvania Railroad can haul people to Wildwood and Cape May and only charge $1.50 for this trip of about eighty miles one way.

The only reason for the conditions on this jerkwater division is that the Philadelphia and Reading does not run to adelphia and Reading does not run to husband.

Can one imagine her feelings upon finding him unfaithful? Can she just get out? She wouldn't leave her chil-dren-and if she took them, what support would she have? A man can sim-ply say "I'm going!" and get out. That's why so many women live with That's why so many women live with men whom they know to be unfaithful. "Burglar and the Old Maid" To the Editor of the Eventing Public Ledger: Sir-Will you please print in the Peo Forum as soon as possible a poem entitled "The Old Maid and the Burgiat"?

MRS. H. HARRIS. Collingdale, Pa., Pebruary 12, 1922. THE BURGLAR AND THE OLD MAID I sing a song of a burgiar bold. Who went to rob a house. Mo went to rob a nouse.

He crept into an old inald's room.

As quiet as a mouse.

He looked for a tlace to hide hiratelf—
The folks were all asidep:
And so, said he. "without ceremony.
I'll take a quiet peep."

Under the beg the burgier crops He lay close to the wall.

If he had known, 'twas an eld maid's ream
He never would have had the gall.

He thought of all the mency he'd get. As under the bed he lay That made his hair turn gray. At D o'clock the old maid came in:

"I am so tire!," she said: And, thinking all was safe that night. She never looked under the bed She pulled out her teeth and a big glass And the hair all off her And the burginr he had forty fis As he gazed from under the bed. From under the bed the burgiar crept:

He was a total wreck.
The old maid wasn't atraid at all:
She grabbed him by the neck.
She didn't holler or cry one bit.
But just as cool as a clam. Well, all the saints be pruised. At last I've caught a man Now then the old maid her rev And to the young man, she said:
"Young man, if you don't marry me,
I'll blow off the top of your head." He looked for a place to hide himself; He saw nowhere to scoot

He looked at the treth and the hig glass eye. Then said: "Madam, for the Lord's saile,
