Mrs. Wilson Tells of Household Methods of a Careful, Economical Young Wife

Nothing Is Wasted in This Little Home, and the Fortunes of the Family Are Increasing Instead of Decreasing

THE mechanism of the home should L be run in a methodical and economical manner, the housewife realizing the true dignity of performing the little homely duties that often she feels are menial. In the kingdom of the home, the housewife is truly the queen, and if she be a sensible woman, with a real desire for progress and a dependency, for her declining years, then the word economy does not become loathsome, nor is she bored to death with her daily, routine.

A true-blue, all-American girl, who has been a housewife for the last seven years, told me quite recently that when she married, her husband's salary was barely sufficient for one; yet she determined to make this same money keep two, and save a tiny bit for a rainy day. Many economies of the old-time housewife, were put into practice in this little home, and as they progressed from year to year, they still saved, and just this past spring, the lad had an opportunity to secure a small interest in the firm where he is employed. I call this boy a lad, for he is yet under thirty years of age.

This young housewife proudly urged me to stay and visit with her for a few days, and note her method of home keeping. A motto hangs in this kitchen, "Waste Not. Lest Ye Want." and right under this a calendar, with the days outlined in pencil on which she must pay for certain commodities that cannot be paid daily.

paid daily.
I really think the true success in thi I really think the true success in this home is due to the fact that both the husband and wife not only plan the menus together, but frequently take their basket and visit the shopping community, near their home, about twice a week. Their motto is pay cash, keep out of debt, and save something, if it is only fifty cents.

In this home you will find many articles as they wear taken in hand and if herond repair, utilized for something f beyond repair, utilized for something else. Worn pillow slips are cut open and the worn part discarded, the two strips toward the ends are finished with narrow hems, and used for shelf cloths, in place of the paper covering that the ousewife usually uses.

Many other economies along this line Many other economies along this line keep her quite busy, and her neighbors are proud of her ability to find ways to utilize things that are frequently either used for dust rags or else thrown

After the stockings are beyond re pair, this little woman cuts them in strips about two inches wide and winds in balls, as for the old-fashioned carpet rags; and when she has about four balls, she knits a rug for the bathroom, or perhaps she will use it in the kitchen. or perhaps she will use it in the kitchen. These rugs are really good looking, and are sewed on a piece of ticking after they are knit. Doilies are made from worn table cloths, and a simple scalloped edge made by crocheting around the tiny hem basted in place. One luncheon set made in the manner described was appraised by a linen expert.

scribed was appraised by a linen expert to be worth fifty dollars.

This young woman does not have the temperament or other blues, and she finds time to belong to a club. Her nies have not made her narrow. but rather have given her a broad view of life with the realization that, as the years speed on, she and her husband will achieve success, and will enjoy the comforts and peace that come with an earnest effort. Economic conditions of comforts and peace that come with an came because he wunted to, and after the world today, make it vitally inportant that the housewife adjust her household to an economic basis, and prevent waste; and also take a real series in the fact that she can and does sed. Fites, no. I don't remember env. O pride in the fact that she can and does abor at the dear, sweet homely family.

The husband in this household carries his lunch every day, not now, as a matter of economy, but because the wife feels that it is important that he be provided with the right kind of food; so for this reason this housewife finds buying a whole ham of moderate weight a real economy. A small saw purchased at the hardware store, and a good knife, with hubby's assistance as a butcher, made it possible to cut the ham as they desire. Four Good Words

Jack and Janet and Mrs. Blue Jay seek to get Blue Jay out of jail. The little old gray man says Blue Jay must stay in jail until four humans or forest folk can be found to say a good word for him.

CHAPTER IV When a Bird Plays Tricks

MRS. BLUE JAY felt sore at heart because Judge Owl would not say a good word to help get Blue Jay out

'Ho! Ho! Ho! You need three more good words besides your own," said the little old gray man to Mrs. Blue Jay. 'And three good words are hard to

Just then they heard Cock Robin's joyous spring song. And soon they came upon Cocky Robin himself, busily gathring sticks with which to build his nest.

"Good morning. Cocky Robin," cried Mrs. Blue Jay. "Will you say a good word to get Blue Jay out of jail?"

"Is Blue Jay in jail?" cried Cocky Robin. "That is good news. Hurrah! Hurrah! Blue Jay is in jail."

"But poor Mrs. Blue Jay wants to get Blue Jay out of jail," said Janet to the Robins. "Can't you say a good word for him?"

"Blue Jay tore my nest to pleces last spring," sang Cocky Robin. "I am glad he is in jail."

"Blue Jay smashed my eggs last spring," sang Cheery Robin. "I am glad he is in jail."

So they traveled further into the

So they traveled further into the forest to where Fuzzy Squirrel was looking for hidden nuts.

"Say! Say! Say, Fuzzy Squirrel! Will you please say a good word to help get Blue Jay out of jail?" begged Mrs. Blue Jay.

Fuzzy Squirrel perked his head on one side and grinned.

"Is Blue Jay in jail?" he chattered.

They saw at once it was no use ask-meat."

"Ho! Ho! Ho! You see what a tricky husband you have." laughed the little pld gray man as Mrs. Blue Jay flew sadly along. "It is no use looking further for birds, beasts or humans who will say a good word to get Blue Jay out of jail."

"Alas! Alas! Alas! I am afraid not." wailed the poor little bride.

"Don't give up." cried Janet, feeling very sorry for pretty Mrs. Blue Jay." What Fuzzy Squirrel and the hunter said has given me an idea. I know where we can find some one to say a good word to get Blue Jay out of jail."

What was the idea Janet got from what Fuzzy Squirrel and the hunter said? Can you guess. Tomorrow it will
