

CLEAN COLLEGE SPORTS THEME OF EDUCATORS

President Hibben, Princeton, and Prof. Mendell, Yale, Suggest Methods to Remove Suspicion—Would Banish Coaches to Stands

The surest and best way to lift the "cloud of doubt" which now hangs over collegiate athletics is to place the conduct of athletes in the hands of undergraduates, according to President Hibben of Princeton, and Professor Clarence W. Mendell, the chairman of the Board of Control of the Yale Athletic Association.

These two famous educators, in holiday speeches yesterday, intimated that the universities and colleges first must be sure that their representatives stand for clean sport and then place the honor of the institution in their hands.

Professor Mendell urged that coaches be barred from the playing field during a contest. He pointed out that in the classrooms the instructors teach their subjects to the students, giving them the best of their knowledge, but in the time of the examination the undergraduates must shift for themselves. He likened the examination to the game on the sport field and adds that the athletic instructor should be forced to sit in the stands.

Two Remedies

Dr. Hibben pointed out that the darkest cloud on collegiate athletics is caused by professionalism. He said: "The press has been questioning whether college athletics are on as high a plane as they naturally ought to be. I feel, if we are to do anything to lift that cloud of doubt, it can be done only through joint action of the universities in various parts of the country."

"The most serious blight upon college athletics today is the attitude of suspicion which rests upon them because of insidious forms of professionalism. But I feel that there are two things that every university can do and ought to do in order to create a higher tone in athletics."

"The first is that every university must make absolutely sure that its representatives stand for clean sport on with football are the most anxious that this situation be corrected."

Agreeing with President Lowell, who "more than ten years ago pointed out the tendencies in sport," Prof. Mendell said the question is not whether football is to be abandoned, but how to protect it against abuses which threaten its existence. "Football is too fine a game to be lost," he said.

"The most insidious of the abuses," Prof. Mendell said, "is professionalizing of the game."

"By this I mean," he said, "not merely the transfer into college of men whose sole object is to play football, but also the transfer of the game from the undergraduate to the coach."

"At this point, however, I take issue with President Lowell. I would not get rid of coaches; I would insure the playing of the entire game by the undergraduates after they had been trained just as well as possible by the best coaches available."

Clean Sports Plea

"I say for Princeton and I believe for our whole body of alumni that what we wish above everything else in our athletic relations, or other universities is that it may be said of our teams as they go on and as they come off the field: 'There is a body of clean sportsmen.'"

"Just one other thing I wish to speak about: That every university must take upon itself to review the situation and to act if necessary. We must be sure at Princeton that we have absolutely unquestioned amateurs on our teams; men neither directly nor indirectly rewarded for their services in any way whatsoever or from any source. I do not mean that the men engaged in athletics should not have every advantage given to other students in the way of scholarship, but that they should not have any greater advantage. There should not be any subsidizing of athletes and all the universities of our country should see to it that we have clean sport and only amateurs engaged in our sport, men above even the suspicion of receiving any assistance not open on the same terms to every one of their classmates."

Protect Game

"Behind the widely quoted statements of A. Lawrence Lowell, president of Harvard, and Alexander Meiklejohn, president of Amherst, lies the firm conviction that too much importance is attached throughout the country to the big football games," Prof. Mendell said. "Perhaps those most closely connected

PREDICTS TITLE FOR GERMANTOWN

Otto Faltermayer, High School Secretary, Sure Clivedens Will Repeat Baseball Triumph

TEN PITCHERS IN SQUAD

BY PAUL PREP
"GERMANTOWN HIGH SCHOOL has the best chance to win the interscholastic league baseball championship this year. I'm not the one to make rash predictions or anything like that, but I feel confident the Clivedens will repeat their performance of last season."

Otto Faltermayer, secretary of the Germantown High School and prominent in athletic affairs at the institution was the speaker. Mr. Faltermayer was coach of the Green and White ball tossers last year and he should know whereof he speaks.

"The boys have been working in the school gymnasium for two weeks," Mr. Faltermayer continued, "and I have had plenty of time to get a line on them. Every one of the new candidates reported in perfect condition, and all of last year's players are ready for the opening game."

"Gene Barrett will lead the team again this season. Gene probably is the best second baseman in Philadelphia scholastic ranks and is a capable leader. Sid Langston will take care of the first sack and he is a corker. Carberry one of last year's outfielders, will take Butler's place at short. Third base is still in doubt."

"We will carry ten pitchers on our squad this season. All of the fifteen candidates that reported for the twirling job were good, and we have had much difficulty in selecting the first team. While none of the new boys is as good as Johnny Kaufmann, they are not

Italy Seeks Davis Cup: Enters for First Time

New York, Feb. 23.—The fourth challenge to be received by the United States Lawn Tennis Association for the Davis Cup contest of 1933 has come from Italy. This is the first time Italy has entered the competition. Leopo Croce, as president of the Federazione Italiana del Tennis, forwarded the challenge to Julian S. Myrick, president of the U. S. L. T. A. The nations whose challenges already are on record are British Isles, Czechoslovakia, France and Italy.

Italy is a real rivaling staff.

"Another thing in Germantown's favor is that Coach J. Yeckel Lackey is again at the helm. Coach Lackey was ill last year, and I was forced to take the job of coaching the team. He had made a great combination, and it was easy for me to win the championship with the boys he had selected. While he deserved the credit, I received it. But this year he is well, and I'm sure he will win the honors."

"We are going to practice on the new Germantown Academy field, if possible. We haven't a field, and maybe the G. A. authorities will allow us to play on their lot. If this isn't possible, I think we will play on Penn Charter's field at Queen Lane. We hope to have a field of our own before the next football season, and I think it will be in the neighborhood of Washington Lane and Chew street."

"All our games this season will be played away from home. West Philadelphia High, too, I understand, is in the same fix, and will play all games on the opponent's field."

"As I said before, I expect Germantown High School to win the interscholastic league championship this year. If it doesn't, I'll be at a loss to understand the reason. For I think it has the likeliest looking aggregation of ball-tossers in the circuit. And that's said with all due credit to other schools in the league."
